Chorus On Way To Pay Off Debt

Singing a New Tune All the Way to the Bank

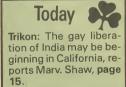

by Allen White

A moneymaking concert by the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus and the success of a new fundraising organization are putting the group in their best financial condition in over five years. The final payment of a mortgage on a home loan that helped finance the chorus' 1981 national tour should be made in the next four months.

Last Thursday's sold out Davies Hall concert will yield, organizers say, a net profit of over $35,000. This will be supplemented by a $10,000 grant from their new fundraising arm, the San Francisco Choral Foundation.

Approximately $40,000 of these funds will go toward paying off a $60,000 mortgage payment on a member's home. The home is one of three that were mortgaged to finance the costs of the

The tour is credited, by many, as stimulating the creation of dozens of gay performing arts groups across the country. The 125-member chorus was highly acclaimed as they performed in nine cities from coast to coast. On their return, Castro Street was closed to traffic to welcome the chorus members home.

Pelosi Hit for Role In Killing Demo Gay Caucus

Accused of Shunting Aside Gay Concerns; Criticized for Helping Eliminate Gay Voice

by Allen White

Controversy erupted this past weekend in the 5th District Congressional race as charges and countercharges were levied concerning Nancy Pelosi's past actions on gay and lesbian issues. An unsigned pink sheet mysteriously appeared in the Castro area over the weekend stating that Pelosi favored the abolition of the Democratic Party's Gay and Lesbian Caucus, had removed references to the gay community from the 1984 Democratic Convention program guide, and has "consistently shunted aside our issues as politically democratic for the porty". damaging for the party.'

Pelosi forces quickly retorted with a similar flyer disputing those charges with detailed ex-planations. Specificly, Pelosi claimed that she in fact worked to defeat the attempt to abolish the Gay and Lesbian Caucus in

But according to a Baltimore Sun article on the battle for Democratic Party leadership in 1985, Pelosi did not defend the gay caucus, but rather agreed with the abolition of the party's gay voice in an effort to move the Democratis closer to a centrist position.

"You can't go any faster than the American people want," Pelosi is quoted as saying.

A BRIEFER MESSAGE

In the Baltimore Sun interview In the Baltimore Sun interview Jan. 4, 1985, she said she would limit the number of official party caucuses to three (women, blacks, Hispanics) and give the party a "briefer message" based on con-

Pelosi told the Sun, "You don't have to address everything." Instead, she recommends, the party should concentrate on "the areas of consensus where we have com-mon ground with the American people. You can't go any faster than the American people want."

Another issue brought out by the flyer was Pelosi's actions during the Democratic convention.

In 1984, Scott Smith, a former lover of Harvey Milk, was remov-ed as host to the Mississippi del-egation at the Democratic Con-vention by Pelosi. "I was removed because I was too gay,' charges Smith.

community was closely edited by Pelosi until it was ultimately decided to kill the article. The story detailed the history of the gay community in San Francisco. A paragraph discussing gays in the gold rush era was removed by Pelosi who, according to two sources said, "People will think that some of San Francisco's founding fathers were gay."

In the final version of material distributed by the Host Commit-tee, San Francisco's gay commu-nity was relegated to a few paragraphs under the title, "The Castro and Noe Valley."

Ken Maley, media consultant, also confirmed the problems between Focus Magazine and Pel-osi. "Though there was a Media Committee, Nancy Pelosi wanted to dictate everything," Maley told the Bay Area Reporter.

COMMITMENT

The pro-Britt flyer also questioned Pelosi's commitment to concerns such as AIDS.

Pelosi currently states in her campaign literature that she believes "AIDS is a national health crisis and the search for a cure must be a national priority."
It has been noted that though she is known as a fundraiser, she has never raised significant money for AIDS.

In the leaflet distributed throughout Castro last week, the question is asked, "Where was Nancy Pelosi during the last decade when our community was fighting AIDS, anti-gay discrimination and anti-gay violence while we were fighting for our lives? Why is Nancy Pelosi now appearing at gay events for the first time in her life? Can Nancy Pelosi really be trusted to represent us in Congress?"

Pelosi's campaign office responds, "Nancy Pelosi worked with the gay community in our fight against Anita Bryant. Nanrights for gays and lesbians as part of the Party agenda. Pelosi has walked precincts in the Cas-tro working for issues of importance to the gaylesbian commu-nity. Nancy Pelosi has raised money for gay candidates for public office. Nancy Pelosi has een there for us.

But the Britt campaign counters, "Pelosi has only done one thing for gay rights since working against Anita Bryant ten years ago in 1977. She bought one ticket for a No on 64 fundraiser. Walking a precinct in the Castro is not working for gay rights."

Last fall, a group of chorus members set out to form a nonprofit organization which would be structured to ensure a healthy financial base and to quickly eliminate the tour debts.

Lynn Luckow, president of the Choral Foundation, said, "We have now been successful in raise ing over $30,000 for a long term ang over $30,000 for a long term endowment fund. The interest from this fund will be used to assist the needs of the chorus." Luckow said the foundation has been able to make $10,000 available to the chorus which will go directly towards the debt.

Tim Garner, president of Golden Gate Performing Arts, which handles the business operation of the chorus, said the $10,000 will be added to the profits from the Davies Hall event to reduce the mortgage.

DARK CLOUD

A $60,000 balloon payment on the mortgage must be made be-fore August. Garner and Luckow said an early payment will result in a savings on interest and they said they hope to move up the payment date.

The debt of the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus has been hanging like a dark cloud over the chorus for almost six years. The newer members of the 110-member chorus have had to bear the responsibility of a debt which they had no part in creating. Only five of the current members went on the 1981 tour.

The Davies Hall concert last ek was one of the most finantially successful in the organiza-tion's history. In addition to the Gay Men's Chorus, the concert starred Charles Pierce and Barbara Cook.

Before the concert began, the San Francisco Choral Foundation gave a private reception in the Wattis Room located in the hall. Contributors to the foundation were invited to party. Luckow said this type of event will be planned as a further incentive to garner contributors.

GGPA's Garner said, "There were less than 200 unsold seats. We program similar concerts in the future." Garner continued,

"The chorus has a core audience and we know we must expand that audience if we want to max-imize our potential."

The chorus will be performing a major concert this summer at Grace Cathedral. They will also be performing with the Lesbian Gay Mixed Chorus at the annual Gay Musical Celebration planned in conjunction with San Francisco's Lesbian/Gay Free-dom Week celebrations in June.

Gay Leaders Rally Behind Britt In Display of Unity

Seventy-five of San Francisco's most respected gay leaders joined together last Saturday in a unique display of unity and support for Harry Britt in his run for the United States Congress. Doctor With AIDS Fights Suspension

First In U.S. to have Practice Restricted

by William Burks

CHICAGO—At Cook County Hospital, a physician who has AIDS has requested a formal hearing to contest the Cook County Board's decision to suspend him from all contact with Area health care experts said they believe the case is the first in the nation of a physician with AIDS having his practice restricted, although the U.S. Centers for Disease Control reported that as of last May, 922 health care workers had been diagnosed with AIDS.

There are no documented cases of AIDS virus transmission from health care workers to patients, according to the CDC. It estimates 1,200 health care workers in the U.S. are infected with the AIDS virus. The doctor, whose name has been withheld to protect his privacy, is being represented by the American Civil Liberties Union of Illinois.

Cook County Hospital is the 700-bed public health facility serving Cook County Hospital is the 700-bed public health facility serving 5 million residents of Chicago and nearby townships. The county board—an elected body—ultimately administrates the hospital. According to the hospital's Medical Staff Bylaws, the county board president must appoint a hearing committee within 10 days of the doctor's Feb. 23 request and must schedule a hearing "as soon as reasonably possible." The president reportedly has appointed a committee, but no hearing has been scheduled yet.

The board also is required to provide the doctor notice of the conduct or other reasons or subject matter than were considered in making the adverse recommendation earlier this month. The doctor requested the adverse recommendation earner this month. The doctor requested he board hearing rather than take his case directly to federal court and sue for handicap and equal protection violations. The county board must vote on the hearing committee's recommendations, and, depending on the outcome, the case could yet be settled by the

The case began Feb. 2, when, after learning that the physician had AIDS, the county board voted to suspend him with pay because he refused to accept a position in which he would have no patient contact. Three committees—the hospital Peer Review Committee, the Executive Medical Staff, and a joint committee of physicians and board members—subsequently voted to restore the doctor's full clinical

The county board voted 12-2 at a meeting the next week to allow the The county board voted 12-2 at a meeting the next week to anow the doctor to continue his employment, but to have only technical, diagnostic, consultative, teaching, or administrative and quality-care duties, and no contact with patients. Board members said concern over patients' fears of contracting AIDS and their own fears of being sued by patients played a role in their closed-door decision, at which they heard no medical testimony.

Infectious disease specialists from six Chicago hospitals and university medical centers had urged the board, based on medical facts of AIDS transmission, not to remove the doctor from his practice. Dr. Bernard Turnock, director of the Illinois Department of Public Health, and Dr. K. T. Reddi, infectious disease specialist for the Chicago Health Department, joined the doctors at a press conference urging that the vote be made on the facts rather than the public's—or board members'—fears.

Dr. Stuart Levin, Director of the Section of Infectious Diseases at Rush-Presbyterian St. Luke's Hospital asserted, "We've put our lives and the lives of our families on the line over this fact"—AIDS cannot be transmitted by casual contact.

Cook County Hospital adopted the CDC's guidelines for infection control last August, according to the ACLU's legal director, Harvey Grossman, who said, "The physician in this case has in the past and will continue in the future faithfully to comply with those guidelines. There is no allegation that this physician has ever engaged in behavior not countenanced by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Cook County Hospital's appreciation. County Hospital's own Infection Control Committee.

Of the two county board members voting against restricting the doctor's practice, one cited medical evidence as the basis for his decision, but the other said she believes he should be removed from the hospital altogether. The board's vote, ignoring medical opinion on AIDS transmission, came immediately before release of a state health department survey indicating that 80 percent of Illinois residents, including all ethnic groups and income levels, believe their personal physician and the health department are believable sources of information about AIDS.

The physician has continued to provide full patient care at the hospital, with the exception of two days at the beginning of his controversy with the board.

Some in the gay and lesbian community had expressed concern over the timing of the board's initial action, a few weeks before an election in which a physician at Cook County Hospital and co-founder of its AIDS clinic, Dr. Ron Sable, was running as an openly gay candidate for the seat representing the 44th Ward on the city Council.

Sable was thought by many to have a good chance of defeating incumbent Alderman Bernard Hansen in the heavily-gay northside lakefront ward, but some feared an association of newspaper headlines about an anonymous "AIDS doctor" with Sable might influence votes. On election day, Feb. 24, Sable lost by 1,600 votes, a seven-percent

In Alameda County, the East Bay AIDS Project is eligible to receive donations as is Marin AIDS Support Network in Marin County and Project Ellipse in San Mateo County.

T-Room Arrest Leads To Suicide

Tragedy Calls Into Question Police Practices in Making Arrests

A man arrested in the public restroom at the Marina Yacht Club last December jumped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge last month. The suicide underscores the community concern as entrapment charges have been leveled at police. The man, a school teacher with over 25 years experience, was one of over 80 people arrested at the Marina Green restroom on charges of engaging in public sex.

Lt. Tom Hettrich, an officer at Northern Station, said, "It is a restroom, not a bordello. These people should know the differ-ence between right and wrong." He strongly defended the arrests saying that people were breaking

Public Defender Jeff Brown, however, disagreed. He was outraged by the police actions. "I think it's terrible," he said. "People should be given a warning. It reminds me of the old days at the Black Cat where police would entice gays into sexual activity." He continued, "I think it's a huge waste of public money."

Attorney Paul Wotman said, "My experience with this type of case leads me to believe these ome things in life, as the song goes, you don't notice are missing until they show up again. A sense of community is one of those things. You easily take it for granted — its signs and symbols are all still visible and surround our daily lives. And community institutions take on a permanence and a life of their own.

Then something happens and all of a sudden you notice that extra dimension that brings all the signs and symbols and institutions to life. A kind of psychological earthquake jolts you into awareness and all the external signals of community take on a genuine meaningfulness. Yes, Virginia, there really is a gay and lesbian community!

Harry Britt's historic run for the U.S. Congress seems to be such an event. The Britt campaign has triggered that jolt of public community spirit that we have for a long time missed. In recent years, we've had battles to fight that sometimes have split this community. There has been a certain turning inward as well, as gays and lesbians have come to rely on a very personal and private community for support in days of very personal struggle.

arry Britt's campaign has brought us out of our shells and out of our closets. Suddenly, we have a public figure and a single cause to rally around and rallying is exactly what we're doing. Britt's bold move — to stake a claim for a seat in the U.S. Congress — has galvanized the community unlike anything in recent memory.

People who have in the past had great differences with Harry Britt are finding a greater unity that overcomes differences. Harry Britt has never been so popular and so well loved. His campaign workers are meeting a greater response than even they had expected. Wearing a bright blue and white Britt for Congress button has become a statement of gay pride and gay community. Yes, we've had our differences and will no doubt disagree in the future. But we know where our interests lie and we know when to act on those interests.

ver 200 lesbian activists who have publicly endorsed Harry have been candid and enthusiastic in stating their reasons for uniting behind Britt's campaign. Many have had public disputes with Britt in past years. But all see greater benefits to the lesbian and gay community in electing Harry to Congress.

Women are praising Harry as a strong and eloquent supporter of women's concerns. Our issues are his issues, they're saying: comparable worth, AIDS care, rent control, environmental issues, the needs of the poor.

In addition to that, Britt is a strong voice on gay and lesbian concerns. He has both a solid appeal to gay voters and a broad-based constituency on numerous issues. Britt is the unity candidate, uniting the gay community and coalescing with non-gay voters.

The surge of support in the lesbian and gay community shows that our community knows very well the golden opportunity now before us. Not only is Britt a voice for our cause, he is an effective politician. He has that right ingredient for politics: he's a coalition builder.

The gay and lesbian community is an established, permanent part of San Francisco life, there's no doubt about that. But it's wonderful to see that community publicly uniting not to defeat another threat to our well-being, not to just hold onto the status quo, but to achieve a positive and historic goal by sending Harry Britt to the U.S. Congress.

OPPRINT

In the Forefront of the Progressive Agenda

by Nancy Walker President, Board of Supervisors was very proud to be with my colleague, Harry Britt, a month ago on the steps of City Hall as he announced his candidacy for Congress. Harry's campaign represents a historical opportunity, not just for lesbians and gay men, but for all progressive San Franciscans.

San Francisco's seat in Congress has long been seen as a position from which national leadership is exerted. It is not enough for our representative in Washington to vote right. We have come to expect our member of Congress to be in the very forefront of the American progressive agenda.

Harry Britt is that kind of leader, the only candidate in the congressional race whom we can trust to be both right and effective on the issues we care about.

In the seven years I've served on the Board of Supervisors with Harry, I have come to admire his ability, integrity and high sense of principle. No one on the board works harder than Harry, and no one has produced more important legislation on a broad range of issues.

Harry Britt has led the fight to keep rents and taxes down, to protect our neighborhoods and environment, to establish fair pay and working conditions for women and minorities, to sever city connections with South Africa.

'On the most urgent concern facing San Franciscans today, AIDS, Harry's role has been critical. Five years ago, he secured the first city funds in the nation for AIDS services.'

arry Britt has been the board's most outspoken critic of the Reagan Administration's cruel policies that bring suffering to the elderly and the poor of our city, and the reckless military adventures that threaten world peace.

Harry has been an articulate national spokesperson in opposition to the influence of the religious right wing in politics.

Harry has been extraordinarily successful in forging a consensus among his board colleagues on gay and lesbian issues. Antidiscrimination protections, domestic partners legislation, and funding for gay services and cultural programs resulted from his skilled legislative efforts.

On the most urgent concern facing San Franciscans today, AIDS, Harry's role has been critical. Five years ago, he secured the first city funds in the nation for AIDS services. He has helped develop and monitor our city's model AIDS programs, and has successfully lobbied state and federal legislative leaders to increase AIDS budgets.

Last fall, Harry was the state co-chair of the extraordinarily successful NO on 64 campaign to stop Lyndon LaRouche's effort to quarantine people with AIDS.

He authored San Francisco's strong ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons with AIDS or ARC.

None of the other major candidates has such an outstanding track record. His major opponent has no record at all on the major issues.

In recognition of his record, and the historical importance of sending a gay activist to Congress, Harry has won the enthusiastic support of virtually the entire lesbian and gay leadership of the city — and, indeed of the nation. The degree of unity in the community, while never airtight, is unprecedented for a political candidate.

Harry Britt's election to Congress would be a giant leap forward for the lesbian and gay community which all too often has had to fight just to preserve the status quo. I can only imagine the hope that Harry's victory would instill in the hearts of people suffering from AIDS, and of gay people nationwide.

arry would be so much more than just a gay Congressman. I know that he would be a champion of women, minorities, working people and seniors. I know that he would fight to renvironmental protection, education, health care and civil liberties. I know that he would make a real difference.

I have the deepest respect for Harry's courage and independence, which he has demonstrated anew by making this challenging race for Congress. Polls show that Harry has an excellent chance of winning. But only if we get involved in his campaign — and then get out and vote.

Like other concerned San Franciscans, I've asked myself who could do more for us in Congress. For me the answer is easy: the person who has done the most already — my colleague and friend, Harry Britt.

So please join me and my colleagues, John Molinari, Dick Hongisto and Tom Hsieh, in voting for Harry Britt for Congress on April 7.

Pay Your Toll, Pope

* Why all the uproar over the pope's visit? Let's put it all in proper perspective. The pope will arrive at Crissy Field and immediately go to the Golden Gate bridge which he will bless. Now I don't mean to belittle the bridge, it's a grand bridge as bridges go. But does the pope know that the bridge is facing bankruptcy due to mismanagement and greed? It's badly rusted in places, needs a new deck and many have jumped off its span to a premature death.

The blessing is certain to eause a huge traffic sparl jumped off its span to a premature death.

The blessing is certain to cause a huge traffic snarl, causing a volume of cursing among travelers of astronomical proportions. As well as lawsuits for fender benders and other accidents that may not be settled until the year 2000. Actually since the bridge is public property the pope has no business on it unless he pays the toll and keeps moving. Hopefully he won't get caught in his own traffic jam, in which case he might just curse also and nullify the whole blessing. blessing.

But think of it, when it's all over and if all goes well, the Golden Gate bridge like the pope will be forevermore a holy shrine.

★ Mike Hippler's article on his travels in the Yucatan is a classic example of the bankrupt intellect of this self-styled media junkie.

In the guise of illuminating the Yucatan, Hippler penned the sort of drivel one might expect to find on bathroom walls.

The Yucatan is the home of one of the world's mos The rucatan is the nome of one of the words is most beautiful and revered cultures. At its florescence, the Mayan civilization equalled the Roman or Egyptian cultures in its writing, mathematics, astronomy, calendrics, architecture and art. The ruins of the Mayan cities are awe inspiring and deeply moving sights. They offer valuable lessons if one cares to learn.

One important lesson for all gay men and lesbians is the role of the Roman Catholic Church in the Spanish conquest of Mexico. In the name of God, the church destroyed the Mayan civilization and nearly wiped all record of it from history. Needless to say, the same church would do likewise to the gay/lesbian culture if our vigilance were not constant.

I suspect that all Hippler cared to see at Chicken Itza and Uxmal are the views available through any glory hole.

It puzzles me as to why Hippler would bother traveling all the way to Mexico. Surely his limited vision could easily be satisfied by a visit to any adult book store or dinge bar South of Market.

Harry Is One of Our Own

* An open letter to Kim Corsaro, editor of Coming Up!:

I was deeply saddened by the editorial attacking Harry Britt in the current issue of Comping Up! Sad-dened first because Harry has one of the most progressive voting records of any officeholder in the nation and because he has been on the front line in battles not only on behalf of lesbians and gay men but renters, the aged, working people, and others.

Of course he has had only limited success because Or course he has had only limited success because the mayor of this city, strongly backed by big-money interests both gay and straight, has consistently done all she could to thwart his progressive programs, as in her vetos of his legislation for rent control and the rights of domestic partners.

But I feel even more saddened because you do not understand the significance of Harry's candidacy in the context of the current AIDS holocaust. You say one of the reasons we should vote for Nancy Pelosi is because of her good connections with the national Democratic political establishment.

But that very establishment has utterly failed the But that very establishment has utterly failed the dying gay men of this country, as have both the medical establishment and the national government. It is because of their fumbling, ineptitude, and delay (not Harry Britt's) that a whole generation of gay men may very well die. Their policies (or lack thereof) have been killing us off as effectively as if they had put on brown shirts, come into our bedrooms in the middle of the night, and dragged has saye. dle of the night, and dragged us away.

Despite their sudden interest in the current elec tion campaign, Nancy Pelosi's well-heeled national friends have in fact been collaborators in the holocaust-by-neglect.

Harry Britt is a sign of hope for many of us precis ly because he has never bought into that establish-ment and because, like Harvey Milk before him, he has come to confront the government with the vision and wisdom of one who has always been locked out.

Nancy Pelosi's rich and powerful friends have never lived the experience of the outsider, and that is why they have not been motivated to do whatever it may take to stop the holocaust. Harry Britt has that motivation because he is one of our Flavored Boot Polish?

* Flavored condoms! Let's hope it's not fruit flavored. If you can put one on completely with no hands then you have great control and may not have a sterile but clogged windpipe. We're not talking about licking a popsicle or an ice cream cone.

It's "safe sex," but come on, what's next? Flavored boot polish, perhaps? This could lead to a run on erasers and balloons. Wait until they discover the elastic in jock straps (some have).

Surgeon: "Who has been chewing on my gloves again? They look like a field of warts."

It could be a turn off. Haven't you seen some condom-covered whatnots that look like escapees from Sesame Street? "This is S for Safe Sex." They look as if they'd bounce across the screen. I certainly don't want to nibble on Kermit the Frog.

It must have been the next logical step. Lotions, potions, powders and ointments . . . soon we'll put them all on and watch them have sex for us. Some-one will say watching makes you go blind.

In addition to the wreckless damage that you have done to my reputation, I take great exception to the advice given to your readers. ★ Granting that KQED has not been perhaps as sensitive to gay concerns as one might wish, it does seem that our communities are spending too much time and energy on this issue. right to sexuality in private, when 32 state registators want homosexuality condemned in state sex education classes, when the fundamentalists and Attorney General Meese want to do away with all sex and sexual depictions, gay and straight, and when HIV testing threatens gay civil liberties in the U.S. and all over the world, KQED's actions should be considered not much worse than "benign neglect."

Our communities around the world need to mobilize now to make sure that the rights that we worked so hard to secure are not eroded by fear of AIDS, scapegoating of sex, or the superstitious natterings of churches which make Ghengis Khan look tolerant.

If people want to boycott KQED, fine. But let's not spend a lot of time and energy on these relatively trivial issues when our basic rights are so very much at stake.

The Fable of the Crabs

* Some of the stuff being bandied about regarding the Congressional race reminds me of a story. With apologies to that estimable publication, The California Journal, let me call it "The Matter of the Gay Crabs."

It seems that down at Fishermen's Wharf there was a fellow doing his thing at his crab pots: He kept one pot for cooking and the other pot for holding the live crabs.

A tourist passing by said to the man, "Mister, one of your crabs is getting out over the top."

"Oh," came the reply, "he won't get out."

"How can you be so sure?" the tourist asked.

"Well, you see all those crabs are gay. They climb up on one another, and just when one manages to get to the top, the others get jealous. They all pull away, dropping the top crab back to the bottom of the pot."

Here in San Francisco Sup. Harry Britt has been steadily climbing up the political pile, using much of the gay community as his support. Now, just as he's got the chance to get out of the local pot and into national recognition, we hear the stirrings of some of the lower crabs, urging everyone to pull away and let him fall back to the bottom.

As one voter, I find a lot of Britt's political ideas out of tune with my own. However, he is an openly gay activist who has earned the respect of a great many people in high places. Elected to Congress, his voice will be heard and his voice will be that of a united gay community in this area.

Harry Britt is the only real candidate that gay voters in San Francisco should consider.

Don Rotan San Francisco

Not The Pope's Place

 \star I sent this letter to a very conservative Catholic friend of mine and to my great surprise the answer was that I should try to get it published. Here it is:

There is a very controversial discussion going on here about the question of whether the pope should visit the Coming Home Hospice when in San Francisco. In my opinion, this would be topping the ongoing bigotry. Even the pope, in spite of his condemnation of gay people and gay life, could not be unmoved when confronted with people dying of this terrible disease AIDS.

It is all too easy (and cheap) to show empathy, give Holy Blessings and leave, still despising and condemning them. God created homosexuals as well as heterosexuals. Would He forbid one group from using their natural sex desires? But the pope regards himself to be more than God, the Creator, and forbids gays from living their lifestyle. Celibacy is a voluntary decision. Using the senses which God gave us is living nature. Let us heteros not be so blase, please.

It should be made possible for individual PWAs, if they have the urge, to roll their wheelchairs to the pope and let him bless their KS lesions or whatever. However, the Coming Home Hospice, which is meant to be for everyone, rich or poor, also gay or not-gay, is not the place for this pope.

Let them take him to a pregnant drug-abuser-AIDS-patient in the Tenderloin. I am afraid that even then, he would not change his mind regarding abortion. He would sooner seen children condemned at birth to die of AIDS, as he would not accept birth control although he has seen the starving kinds in Asia.

I told you that 10-11 beds will be available for AIDS patients at the Coming Home Hospice. The majority of us will go on being with them in their homes and giving them love and care, wherever they are, Pacific Heights or Tenderloin, or what they are, Christian, Jewish, Atheists.

I Support Nancy

★ We need the best person to represent us in Congress, not the gayest. Although I do respect Harry Britt's roll in representing San Francisco, in San Francisco, Washington is a different game. I firmly believe that Nancy Pelosi will be our most effective Representative in Congress at this time.

There is much more to consider here than electing a gay person to Congress. The need for funding AIDS research and education is the most important issue in my mind. I feel that Nancy Pelosi is as committed to this problem as any person, gay or straight, can be.

Ray Mulliner San Francisco

What Is Your Stand?

★ This letter was sent to Father Miles Riley, Archdiocese of San Francisco, 445 Church St., San Francisco, CA 94114:

Father Riley:

As spokesman for the local Catholic archdiocese, you often impressed me as a sincere advocate of truth, justice, and understanding between diverse peoples and of selfless love for one another.

Recently, the leader of your church has somehow allowed a group of ultra-right-wing fanatics to isolate him from the mainstream of the Catholic Church. Taking advantage of this isolation, these misguided zealots have proceeded to run rampant in their powermongering. Their tactics involve the worldwide spreading of lies and hate propaganda against an innocent, historically oppressed minority group: a convenient ready-made scapegoat who they can falsely portray as an imminent threat to the Catholic Church. The goal of this scapegoating is to artificially rally the support of Church members behind them and create a diversion from the many monumental problems facing the Catholic Church today.

Blaming scapegoats is always easier than admitting and then correcting a long history of prior mistakes and corruption.

As you know, the present pope is allowing these people to do such acts in his name. Seeing this, gay people are determined to let this pope know that they object to his implicit support of these irrational and immoral actions aimed at them.

You recently implied that if gays insist on publicly displaying such objections, they risk physical violence by Catholic Church members.

As a highly influential public figure and church leader, you understand that it is your moral duty to clearly understand the legitimate objections of gay people, to actively intercede with the pope on their behalf, and to responsibly mediate between them and those homophobic Catholics who would physically attack innocent gay people rightfully protesting the pope's visit to San Francisco.

You must do more than just give lip service to fulfill these duties. If you do not take all reasonable means to prevent violence to gay people during the pope's visit, then you will be directly responsible for any violence which occurs. One way or another, you —and other local Catholic leaders—must then be held personally accountable for any physical njury or death that is caused by Catholic bullies, vigilante groups, assassins or death squads.

I only hope that your past commitment to creating bridges of understanding and tolerance between diverse groups of people was more than just talk.

Mr. Ehrlich:

Your March, 1987 "I'm Entitled" column leaves one with the impression that if Harry Britt were elected to Congress, he would be the first gay mem-ber. This is not so. The Hon. Gerry Studds, represen-tative from Massachusetts, holds that honor.

I, personally, felt that your attitude was that a gay person could not do a good job in Congress because of the press. This seems very similar to me to the "attitude of the press" toward women, blacks, Hispanics, and other minorities several years ago. Does this mean that I, as a gay person, am not entitled to representation in Congress because of your attitude?

Perhaps, Mr. Ehrlich, you've forgotten who your constituency is. The retail trade and restaurant business has always had substantial numbers of gay people working for them. I, myself, work in the executive offices of a major Union Square specialty store.

I think San Francisco is fortunate to have several good candidates for this seat, among them Harry Britt and Nancy Pelosi. But I think your reasoning for disqualifying Harry Britt is specious and smallminded. I expect more cogent arguments to sway my

The Pope's Free Speech

* By protesting Pope John Paul II himself, and not solely the official natural law positions on homosexuality, on homosexual acts, and on homophile persons which are taught by the Roman Catholic Church, some Bay area gay men and women are throwing away an opportunity to advance the goals of the Cay Liberation Movement.

They have chosen the foolish and prideful self-satisfaction of yelling about or at a homophobic pope. They are showing pro-gay Bay Areans that they are as irrational as the Biblical literalists.

By advocating a virtual quarantine of the pope to ne confines of St. Mary's Cathedral in the Western Addition of San Francisco, these people are denying the liberties of the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution to the pope. If gay people can close ban Francisco to the pope, then anti-gay Christian fundamentalists can logically torpedo Gay Freedom Week at Concord.

The pope symbolizes the unity and the historical continuity of the faith which the Jesus of the Gospels entrusted to Peter and the Apostles. It is a trust to be transmitted to their successors in the episcopacy. It is probably difficult for many non-Catholics and people of other faiths to understand, but the protest against the pope brings deep offense to faithful Bay Arean Catholics.

Why not cooperate peacefully and helpfully with Archbishop John R. Quinn so that the pope will be able to delight Bay Areans as he passes up Market Street enroute to a papal visit with the dying at Coming Home Hospice? By visiting that hospice, John Paul II would demonstrate to the world that the pronouncements of the Biblical literalists, which equals AIDS with God's punishment for homosexual behavior, are deeply evil.

A papal visit to the dying would tremendously ssist the worldwide battles against the AIDS virus and against the social discrimination of persons with AIDS or ARC.

Let us show wisdom and common sense by welcoming Pope John Paul II to the San Francisco Bay Area.

God Knew The Sin of The Church

* Recently, I attended a memorial service at Most Holy Redeemer Church, for a man who died of AIDS. The priest gave a wonderful, moving account on the dearly departed's "walk with God" during his lifetime, his closeness to his family, and his certainty of a promised hereafter. A Sister recited profound verses from the Book of Revelation. But no one talked about, and nowhere was it mentioned, that a prodound, deeply moving relationship had existed between the man who died and the man who sat weeping in the front pew.

I was once again shocked and enraged by the

I was once again shocked and enraged by the Catholic fearful spirit of homophobia which overrides the often joyous spirit of same-sex lovers. After some moments, I realized that despite the priest's theatrical machinations behind the altar "offering" the mass, and despite the Sister's booming intonation of God's word, there would be not one word of tion of God's word, there would be not one word of the lovers' commitment to each other. I was struck, almost immediately, with another realization—God knew! Theatrical machinations and booming intonation notwithstanding, God knew that love existed between these two men. And while this love was unholy and unsanctified in the Church, in the hearts and minds of the people seated there, the service was indeed a lasting memorial to the parting of these lovers.

The absence of any mention of their shared lives, The absence of any mention of their state are tree, by the ever-safe Catholic presence, dramatically serv-ed to remind me that we must love one another as Christ has loved us. Our silent witness to the unmen-tionable, to the words they (Catholic clergy) cannot speak, is no longer valid, and the Church's denial of our strong, beautiful, dynamic lovers is, to use their words a sin words, a sin.

We Can't Afford The Losses

* Over the last couple of years, there has been a decline in attendance/participation on the traditional weekend "runs," overnight trips, and bike tours. The reasons are many, but primarily because there are so many that most people can't afford the time and/or money to go to all of them.

This year alone there are 18 of these events scheduled as follows:

uled as follows:
Force Five Winter trip (Mar. 13-16), Valley Knights Clearlake Run (Apr. 18-19), Constantines "500" (Apr.
25-26), Golden Gate Guards De Haven Run (May 2-3), Cheaters M/C Annual Run (May 22-25), California
Eagles Bike Tour (June 4-7), Cycle Runners "500"
(June 13-14), SFGDI Annual Run (June 13-14), CMC
Annual Run (July 2-5), Force Five Summer Trip (July 10-13), BC Annual Run (July 24-26), California
Eagles Overnighter (Aug. 8-9), Constantines Annual Run (Aug. 14-16), Cycle Runners Annual Run (Sept.
4-7), Golden Gate Guards Annual Run (Sept. 11-13), Warlocks Annual Run (Sept. 18-20), Cycle Runners
"500" (Oct. 3-4), and California Eagles Overnighter at Camelot (Oct. 24-25). at Camelot (Oct. 24-25).

Over the years it has been suggested that some of the clubs get together and put on joint runs/trips/ tours. Remy made another suggestion in a recent col-umn that the Clubs draw numbers—those with odd numbers have their events in odd years and those with even numbers have their events in even years.

I feel that this matter should rest with the Forum of San Francisco. Serious discussions should hopefully bring about a solution to this problem. The "host" Clubs can no longer afford the losses due to poor attendance.

Where Was Pelosi?

gay man wearing a Pelosi for Congress button stopped me on Castro Street Sunday and asked if he could have a minute to tell me of "the many things Nancy has done for us." I listened, but it took less than 30 seconds for the man to advise me that Pelosi has "raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for Alan Cranston, Leo McCarthy, and our other friends."

For that we owe her a seat in the U.S. Congress? As to what she has done for San Francisco and the gay community, let's compare her dismal non-record with the clear, progressive record of her principal opponent, Harry Britt.

- Harry Britt sponsored every major piece of legislation on the Board of Supervisors to control rents and evictions and has worked hard to strengthen our rent controls even more. Where was Nancy Pelosi while the city's rents roared out of slight?
- Five years ago Harry Britt secured the first city funds in the nation to fight AIDS. He has helped develop and monitor our city's model AIDS programs, and has successfully lobbied state and federal legislative leaders to increase AIDS budgets. Where has Nancy Pelosi been while thousands of San Franciscans were being struck with AIDS?
- Harry Britt was the state cochair of the successful campaign against Lyndon LaRouche's Prop. 64. He authored San Francisco's ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons with AIDS or ARC. Where was Nancy Pelosi when LaRouche and others promoted discrimination against persons with AIDS? (Pelosi's sole contribution to the No on 64 campaign was to buy one fundraising ticket.)
- Harry Britt authored this city's tough controls on toxic wastes. As a member of the regional Air Quality and Bay Conservation boards, he's played a leading role in protecting our vital resources. Britt sponsored Prop. N which prevents oil drilling off San Francisco's coastline and he was the author of San Francisco's model energy conservation laws. Where was Nancy Pelosi when pollution was poisoning our air and water?
- Harry Britt introduced the city's first comparable worth legislation six years ago and helped pass Prop. H last year to stop pay inequity among city workers. Where has Nancy Pelosi been while working women were suffering from pay inequity?
- Harry Britt worked hard with church leaders to make San Francisco a sanctuary for Central American political refugees. Where was Nancy Pelosi when the lives of Central American citizens were being threatened by political oppression?
- Harry Britt co-sponsored the law prohibiting the city from doing business with firms that operate in South Africa. Where has Nancy Pelosi been in the struggle against South African apartheid?
- Harry Britt is one of the leading champions of the rights of gays and lesbians, racial minorities and the disabled. He helped create the Office of Citizen Complaints to investigate police misconduct. First as a minister, then as a Supervisor, Britt has been an articulate opponent of right-wing religious influence in government for over 25 years. He marched for civil rights in 1965 with Martin Luther King Jr. in Montgomery, Alabama. What is Nancy Pelosi's record in the fight for civil rights?

These are some of the issues in this campaign—not how much money Pelosi has raised for politicians in Sacramento and Washington who are now trying to return a favor to her. Harry Britt has a proven track record—a strong one—of public service, and frankly, Nancy Pelosi has none.

Harry Britt's record of service clearly makes him the candidate we should send to Congress. Pelosi's woeful lack of such a record clearly makes her unqualified to represent us in Washington. It's as simple as that and no amount of 'political favors owed' to political hacks by political hacks changes this fact.

up. John Molinari's formal entry into the mayoral race today clearly makes him the man to beat in the November election. Even Molinari's prospective opponents agree the popular supervisor is currently the heavy favorite to replace Mayor Dianne Feinstein.

The California League of Conservation Voters honored San Francisco State Sen. Milton Marks (D) last week for having a 100 percent track record in supporting environmental legislation.

Sheriff Michael Hennessey, saying that Harry Britt's "stead-fast support of civil rights, blue collar labor issues and his demonstrated leadership in the fight for AIDS funding closely reflects the leadership of the late Congresspersons Philip and Sala Burton," endorsed Britt this week for Congress in the April 7 special election.

It might work for the Kennedys, Browns, and other political families, but a familiar name was not enough for Bruce Unruh, son of state treasurer Jesse Unruh, last week. Running for the minor office of city treasurer of Redondo Beach, the young Unruh was soundly trounced although he spent a whopping $133,000 compared to only $2,500 spent by the incumbent.

Yes, folks that was indeed Sister Super-Inflated Ego (a/k/a Boom-Boom, a/k/a Jack Fertig) passing out Pelosi literature (and he/she claims to be a progressive?) on Castro Street Sunday. Our favorite publicity hound was dressed as a man however (well, almost)—no black mesh stockings, high heels or make-up to be found (musn't embarrass the nice Pelosi people, you see). Problem was that without the tired drag that he/she is usually in, nobody was noticing, and if there is one thing Sister Boom-Face can't stand, it is to be unnoticed.

Saying that "It's unfortunate that just at this time the problems with Iran came to the forefront," U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, in California on a highly-touted publicity run, admitted that "he has yet to discuss AIDS with Pres. Reagan." Incredible. Translated, that means the Reagan administration is so busy trying to salvage its political ass that the AIDS crisis takes a back burner.

The Stonewall Gay Demo Club is hosting a fundraiser reception for the Britt campaign this Saturday, Mar. 14 at Ralph Payne's house, 1950 Pierce Street; 7-9 p.m., $10, $25, $50 donations asked

The Toklas Club Britt fundraiser is tonight (Thursday, Mar. 12) from 5-8 p.m. at the San Franciscan Hotel (hors d'oeuvres, nohost cocktails; $25 or $50 donation asked).

Allen White (B.A.R.), George Mendenhall (Sentinel), Mike Hippler (B.A.R.), Randy Johnson (Coming Up!), David Lowe (Sentinel), and yours truly are honorary hosts for a big "I'm Just Wild About Harry" party next Wednesday, Mar. 18 (7-9 p.m.) at the Galleon Restaurant where comedian Danny Williams will perform, and the Galleon's own Bob Sandner, the best pianist in the business, will entertain (hors d'oeuvres, no-host cocktails, $20 donation to the Britt for Congress campaign). Sup. Jack Molinari will emcee this one and it should be a good party. See you there.

How Many Furs Can One Man Wear?

ee and me, we go way back. When I was a sissy little thing glued to the tube in the 1950's, there he was, in all his sartorial splendor. I immediately recognized a like spirit in the man who practically invented camp, who gave new meaning to the word "outre," and who lived a life tackola. I said to myself not "Now there's a man with taste" but "Now there's a queen with balls." Liberace was divinely, absolutely mad—and the 1950s needed him.

When I came out some ten or 15 years later, however, Liberace became for me a source of embarrassment, a hopelessly outmoded stereotype, a pathetic reminder of the way we once reacted to our oppression. The man was a travesty, a joke and entirely politically incorrect.

In 1956, he sued a London newspaper for libel when they printed that he was homosexual. "No, I'm not homosexual. My sexual feelings are the same as most people," Liberace said, and the jury believed him. (Were they deaf, dumb and blind? creatures from another planet?)

Then, in 1982 when his former chauffeur and "bodyguard," Scott Thorson, sued him for palimony, asking $70,000 a year for life (I could handle it), he found himself in court once again. That case was settled out of court last December, just before a third scandal erupted early this year.

The National Enquirer (long may it rave), among others, announced that Liberace had (shudder) AIDS. Lee denied it, of course, to the bitter end. And when he died, the cause of death was listed as "ta cardiac arrest due to congestive heart failure brought on by sub-acute encephalopathy (sounds like AIDS to me)." It was the final tawdry performance by an actor determined to remain a closet queen to his dying day.

According to a friend of mine, everyone has the right to live his own life as he sees fit. I'm not sure that I agree. I try to understand how difficult it must have been for Liberace to adjust to a changing world. He would have had to redefine himself entirely, and it might have cost him something. But how difficult can anything be, really, for a man with all that dough? How many furs, cars, houses, candelabras, dogs ("my children"), or chauffeur/bodyguards could one man need?

ure, he might have lost a few fans, but couldn't he have found something else to compensate (like self-respect)? Besides, does anyone have the right to lead a closeted life anymore? Don't we all (and especially the privileged) have a duty to come out to the rest of the world, no matter what it costs us? How else are we ever going to change things? How else is anyone going to realize that, yes, we are everywhere (even Las Vegas)?

Well, he might have upset the middle-aged ladies who were his greatest supporters. I'm sure he reasoned that if he told them he was queer he'd break their little hearts. How, then, could they dream of spending nights alone with him, if they knew he was dreaming of Montgomery Clift instead?

Of course, I'll never understand how his fans could possibly ignore the obvious. How deluded can middle-aged ladies be? But perhaps, as with Paul Lynde and Charles Nelson Reilly, they didn't ignore it. Perhaps they accepted it subconsciously and responded anyway to the warmth he had to give, which to them was so reassuring and nonthreatening. Then again, perhaps they too were deaf, dumb and blind, or creatures from another planet.

Another friend who is critical of Liberace, says, "Think what a role model he might have been —another Harvey Milk, another Tab Hunter, another Divine! Think what effect he might have had, think of the good he might have done. Imagine someone that famous coming out. He would have captured the imagination of the public!"

the public!"

But do we really need such a role model, I wonder? Is that what we want America to think we are? Is that what we want our younger gay brothers to grow up to be? Frankly, I have a hard time picturing Liberace as a spokesperson for gay rights. Perhaps Lee did us a favor by keeping mum. Imagine how you'd feel if Ronald Reagan came out, and then multiply it tenfold. I'd almost rather have had Roy Cohn acknowledge his homosexuality than Liberace.

If Lee, showman that he was, had had any sense at all, he would have realized what a great sensation he could have made by disclosing the truth about his illness. What a funeral he might have had! A pianoshaped coffin, candelabras for days, the skins of endangered species on the floor, and rhinestones ...! It would have been simply too fabu.

When all is said and done, however, when the last note has been played, the last rhinestone sold at auction, I'm left with a foul taste in my mouth. (God knows what Liberace tasted in his mouth.) Like I told my friend Allen, I smell a rat running across the ol' ivories.

Like St. Peter, Liberace denied us three times—at the libel suit, during the palimony suit, and on his deathbed—and, unlike Jesus, I can't forgive him for that. There's something slimy about a man who would go to such great lengths to deny not only the truth, but himself as well. You know, Liberace used to make light of criticism by replying, "I cried all the way to the bank." I wonder where he's crying now.

'What a funeral he might have had! A piano-shaped coffin, candelabras for days, the skins of endangered species on the floor, and rhinestones . .! It would have been simply too fabu.'

Transvestism Gets A Boost

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — Is transvestism attracting sympathy in Malaysia? No one knows for sure, but the Malaysian government seems to be supportive.

The Malaysian news agency, Bernama, recently reported that a tailoring shop and a hairdressing salon, run fully by transvestites, will be set up in Kuala Lumpur under a welfare services department initiative. The government wants transvestites to make their community economically independent.

Department director Wan Azmi Ramli said that the government had been conducting training for 13 transvestites in tailoring and nine in hairdressing since January. Ramli said the classes were designed to make the transvestites financially self-reliant.

Ramli added that the transvestite community needed attention because they were often isolated from society and faced problems of prejudice and victimization.

Thatcher Gov't Leads Fight Against Gay Love Story

LONDON — Political pressure has forced the British Broadcasting Company (BBC) to withdraw plans for a two-part drama about homosexuality aimed at the high schools. According to the Times of London, the Thatcher government was the villain behind the cancellation, spurring on a public outery.

The canceled show is called Mates. The show is about two 17-year-old boys who run away from home and school to pursue a relationship together. They sleep together, and exchange one brief kiss. No explicit sexual activity is included. The series was to have aired this month as part of the BBC's School TV educational series.

Leslie Stewart, who wrote the screenplay for Mates, was shocked at the cancellation. "The idea of writing the play," he explained, "wasn't to make life awkward for teachers, but to get people in a school environment to face up to the fact that homosexuality does exist among teenagers, does cause a lot of grief and can lead directly to suicide and massive unhappiness.

"The idea was to make teachers and teenagers who are gay not feel so desperate about it."

A recent Times poll indicated that over a third of the teachers interviewed said that homosexuality should be presented in the classroom as a way of life. Twenty-four percent of those polled believed that homosexuality should not be taught as acceptable.

Advance To The Rear In Utah

SALT LAKE CITY—Time continued to march backward in Utah with the recent closing of the state's last two adults-only theaters. State officials predict that the next target will be the people who have pornographic cassettes which they send out in mail orders.

"We anticipate a federal indictment against a company that mail-orders videotapes," said Jerome Mooney, an attorney representing the closed-down Capri and Cinema adult theaters. The two theaters closed down in December, making Utah the only state in the union without an adults-only movie house.

A federal attorney, Brent Ward, said there was "a very good possibility of an indictment in Utah of a mail-order video company," adding that several such operations are currently under investigation.

Ward predicted there would be more obscenity cases tried this year than all of the past 20 years combined.

And this is brought to you by the government that promised to get government off your backs. Thanks, Ronnie.

Gay Swim Club Fights For, Gets Meet Sanction

TACOMA — After nearly one and one-half hours of wrangling over the subject, Team Seattle Orea Swim Club, a gay swim club from Seattle, was granted permission for sanction for their swim meet this summer by the Pacific Northwest Association.

Opponents of the sanction argued that they should have the right to restrict the kind of groups which get sanctions. One man asked whether sanctions should be allowed for the Ku Klux Klan or the American Civil Liberties Union if those groups wished to hold a meet. That statement was sharply rejected as having nothing to do with the discussion.

Gay groups were elated with the sanction. Orca member Rick Peterson promised that "We're going to run the best damn PNA meet they've ever seen."

'Marquee Minister' Strikes Again!

SUPERIOR, WI — In the past, these pages have carried reports of the activities of Rev. Craig Hultgren, a Superior, Wisconsin minister who doesn't approve of the ways lesbians and gay men live their lives. Hultgren, who runs the Victory Fellowship Congregation in a former movie theater, has used the theater marquee to attack gay men and lesbians.

His latest message reads:
"Quarantine Too Late: Time to Eliminate." Other recent messages have read: "Jesus Christ Eliminated Sin. So Does AIDS," and "Gay Rights: Sanction To Sin."

Hultgren says he believes that quarantining gays would eliminate the AIDS epidemic. He is in favor of making San Francisco and New York "quarantine cities" where gays and people with AIDS would go to live.

Police Nab 'Gay Bashers'

BOSTON — For the first time in state history, the Massachusetts Civil Rights Act was used successfully in the prosecution of a gay bashing case. Three more men will be tried for gay bashing under the statute in the near future.

In one incident, a 13-year-old boy was arrested after stabbing a gay man in Boston's South Side. Judge Roderick Ireland ruled the boy had committed battery with a dangerous weapon, assault with intention to murder, and a civil rights violation.

In another incident, two men are scheduled to be tried in Roxbury District Court on charges of assault and battery and civil rights violations. Jason Schneider was attacked last September by two young men one block from his apartment. Before the attack, he was asked.

Did U.S. Hold Up AIDS Research?

NEW YORK — Did the United States hold up AIDS research for an entire year? That's the question raised by a British journalist who claims French scientists from the Pasteur Institute have produced documents that indicate that U.S. officials from the National Cancer Institute (NCI) may have produced doctored photocopies of memos which would prove the French were the first to discover the presumed cause of AIDS. This would have been, according to journalist Steve Connor, one year before Dr. Robert Gallo of the NCI said he had discovered it.

Connors made his accusations in the cover story of the Feb. 12 New Scientist, a British scientific journal. As a result of the article, the French are demanding to see all of the original documents concerning the exchange between Pasteur and NCI of laboratory cultures which passed back and forth.

Japanese Consider 'Control' Of AIDS

TOKYO — Japanese Health and Welfare Minister Juro Saito told Justice Minister Kaname Endo that methods of legal control of AIDS are under consideration.

The plan was unveiled after a recent cabinet meeting when the justice minister urged Saito to take legal measures to counter AIDS since there exists, currently, no law that would deny entry to Japan of foreigners believed to be AIDS carriers.

Saito said that the Health and Welfare Ministry is now considering enacting a new law or dealing with it under current preventive laws covering either infectious disease or venereal disease.

D.C. Council OKs Booze License Bill

WASHINGTON—The District of Columbia's City Council passed a final version of an alcoholic beverage licensing bill which gives local residents the power to deny liquor licenses to bars which have been in existence for less than five years.

The bill, sponsored by Councilman John Ray, isn't quite the same bill as it was when it was first introduced in August. But it could still subject at least three gay bars and many other D.C. bars which have been in existence less than five years to citizen petition drives. Such action could force mass revocations of bar licenses.

Under the bill's petition process, all establishments that do not earn at least 45 percent of their gross income from the sale of food must obtain one of two newly-created licenses: a tavern license or a nightclub license. Affected establishments could lose their licenses if a majority of the registered voters living within a 600-foot radius of any establishment sign petitions calling for a license revocation within the first license year after the bill goes into effect.

Health Dept. Hires Gay Services Director—But Won't Say Who

by Charles Linebarger

A spokesperson for Dr. David Werdegar, San Francisco director of health, has told Bay Area Reporter that a new coordinator for lesbian and gay health services has been "identified." But they won't say who it is to be.

"Dr. Werdegar has identified someone in the department to provisionally fill the office immediately," said Margaret Kisliuk, Werdegar's executive assistant. "He wants someone who will have the entire Health Department within their scope," she said.

The office of coordinator of lesbian and gay health services has been vacant since mid-November when former coordinator Pat Norman's resignation took effect. But in fact, because Norman spent several months previous to November in her effort to be elected to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, the office has been directionless for at least six months. Norman is accusing the Department of Public Health of downgrading gay health services.

In October, the office of lesbian and gay health services was moved quietly down the hall from its former location in room 205 to room 219, which lies behind an unmarked door and sits incongruously between rooms devoted to solid waste and garbage.

"I was clearly against that move," Norman told B.A.R. "If I had continued, there is no way that I would be in that office."

Norman had held the position of coordinator of lesbian and gay

Massive Quilt Commemorates AIDS

A group of Northern California community activists has launched an ambitious effort to memorialize the thousands of Americans who have been killed by the AIDS epidemic. Calling themselves The NAMES Project, the group is creating a memorial composed entirely of thousands of individual fabric panels, each bearing the name of a single person lost to AIDS.

son lost to AIDS.

Designed and constructed in homes across America by the friends, lovers and families of people who died of AIDS, the panels will be assembled into one massive expanse of names and displayed across the Capitol Mall in Washington, D.C. on Sunday, Oct. 11, the day of the National March on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights.

Those wishing to participate

Those wishing to participate in the project are encouraged to design and create fabric panels 3 feet by 6 feet in size. Any durable, light-weight material may be used and maximum creative expression is urged in composition.

All people who have experienced the loss of a loved one to the AIDS epidemic are welcomed to participate and organizers suggest that businesses, churches and other community groups sponsor construction of panels commemorating their members or employees who have died of AIDS.

Tax-deductible contributions may be sent to: The NAMES Project, P.O. Box 14573, San Francisco, CA 94114.

For more information, write to the above address or telephone the project at (415) 626-5725. ● health services for nine years since her appointment in October 1977 when the position and the office were created after gays and lesbians marched on the Department of Public Health in June 1977. "That was when the director of Community Mental Health appointed me," she explained.

During her nine years in the office, Norman worked without back-up clerical help or additional staff. Shortly after her departure the Health Department attempted to move a vital gay mental health clinic from the Castro's Health Center 1, on 17th Street. Only vocal community oposition saved the facility.

Norman told B.A.R. she resigned her position partly because the department was not giving her the backing she felt she needed to do her job. "I didn't have support staff or an adequate budget," she said.

Norman was disappointed that

it has taken four months to replace her. "I had hoped to have someone in that position before I left so I could train them."

Jim Foster, a gay man who sits on the city's five-person Health Commission, told B.A.R. that the coordinator's new office for lesbian and gay health services is not that bad. "It's in a large suite of offices. It's the suite that houses the Health Education Offices."

Foster added that he didn't think that the new coordinator would be given back-up staff. "I doubt it. I'm a hundred percent positive that there won't be any clerical help. There simply isn't any money for it. The AIDS Activity Office is grossly underbudgeted and there isn't any money for that."

Foster said state and federal cutbacks, and the AIDS epidemic and new problems with the homeless have sapped the ability of the department to come up with funding for expanding older programs like the lesbian and gay health services office.

Said Kisliuk for the Health Department when asked about the adequacy of the new office for lesbian and gay health services, "If that's the identified office and there is no other space available, (the new coordinator) may prefer to have that office rather than no office at all."

So. Cal. Funeral Director Blasted on Cremation Plan

Fears AIDS Will Contaminate Water Supply; Accused of Furthering Fear Without Facts

by Will Snyder

Two regional presidents of the Neptune Society, an organization which specializes in funeral services, are at odds over the effect on living organisms of AIDS microbes from dead bodies. Richard Jongordon, president of the San Francisco-based Northern California chapter of Neptune, lashed out at a wire report quoting a Southern California Neptune president who believes contaminated blood or other particles from a dead person with AIDS can enter city sewer systems or ground water and further spread the disease.

Emanuel Weintraub, president of the Burbank branch of Neptune, told the PR Newswire that he would like to have a law requiring cremation of people who die of AIDS as the only means of disposing of bodies. "Seeing as medical science is still not exactly sure of all the ways that the AIDS virus can spread, there is only one sure way to make absolutely certain that it cannot be spread by a person after his or her death," said Weintraub, "and that is through cremation. Until we have a law requiring this, we may never be able to be completely sure of cradicating this dread disease."

Jongordon said that Weintraub, "has a right to say what he says," but the director of Neptune's Marina District office said, "We don't agree with that statement of his at all. I was very disturbed by the news release by Weintraub. What he says is something we abhor."

Both Jongordon and his openly gay assistant, Paul Hedvig, speculated that Weintraub "may be trying to drum up business" with his statement.

Weintraub countered when he told Bay Area Reporter that the speculation by Jongordon and Hedvig is "ridiculous, just simply ridiculous."

SEEPING OOZE

Weintraub emphasized the need for cremation because he claimed that both embalming for funerals and the actual placement of the body in a coffin could contaminate city sewage systems and ground water. Embalming involves draining all of the blood out of the deceased's body. "And what do you think is done with this blood when it is drained from the body?" Weintraub asked in the wire report. "It is usually discharged down the drains of our cities' sewage systems.

"Do we know for sure that some of this contaminated blood doesn't seep back into our underground water supply, possibly through some small leaks in the pipes?" he added.

Weintraub also claimed danger of contamination from the casket after burial. "After a short time (in the ground), ground water and mud seep into the casket (often filling it), mix with body fluids and tissues," he said, "and then this ooze seeps back out again to mix with and possibly contaminate our underground water supply."

A spokesperson for Dr. Ken Kizer, state health director, was critical of Weintraub. "All he's doing is furthering people's unjustified fears of AIDS," said Bill Ihle, "and that is really tragic.

"Mr. Weintraub has a fundamental and very basic misunderstanding of the nature of AIDS," Ihle added. "He doesn't understand how it is transmitted and how it is not transmitted. He doesn't understand that it is a very fragile disease. It can only exist out of a host environment for a matter of seconds. Words, actions and deeds prove that Mr. Weintraub is without credibility in backing up his statements."

Jongordon was particularly peeved with Weintraub because he felt that the Southern Californian's statements and the news release itself could indicate that all 21 national offices of the Neptune Society would be in agreement. "The Neptune Society is made up of independent organizations just like the Red Cross or Standard Oil," Jongordon said. "The name, Neptune, represents only an umbrella organization."

SENSITIVITY

Jongordon claimed that Neptune handles an estimated 60-70 percent of all gay deaths in San Francisco. The organization has been in existence since 1973 and handles both regular funerals involving burial and cremations. The local organization even owns a yacht which it uses for burials at sea.

The San Francisco Neptune chapter prides itself in its service to the gay community. "We serve all people with the same sensitivity," said Hedvig. "When I hire somebody, I insist that they are able to touch or hug a gay person or a black person.

"If they can't do that," Hedvig added, "then they don't fit into our image."

Hedvig emphasized that this sensitivity is extremely important in dealing not only with the person with AIDS, but also with a lover or parent. "I had one guy come in to arrange for a future service. One of the first things he asked me was whether it 'was all right for the burial, that he had AIDS.' It broke my heart.

"We have never had a scene in our office;" said Hedvig, "and believe me, we have had some times when a father and a lover have sat across from each other and you could just feel the tenseness."

Hedvig said that he estimated that the San Francisco branch of Neptune services "5-6,000 people per year."

Trikon

The Gay Liberation of India May Be Beginning in U.S.

by Marv. Shaw

magine an organization dedicated to bringing out and bringing together the gay men and lesbians of an entire subcontinent. That world area is India and the other nations of South Asia. The organization is Trikon, and in a little over a year, its successes have been large and surprising, according to Arvind Kumar, one of its founders.

In the U.S. for seven years, Kumar became more and more aware of his gay sexual orienta-tion, made the decision to come out to his father (who accepted out to his father (who accepted his son's gay identity), and began planning with a friend named Suvir to call for like-minded South Asians to organize.

The first step was the January 1986 publication of the Trikon newsletter, which has since be-come a bi-monthly. "Trikon" is Sanskrit for triangle, a symbol chosen because of its association chosen because of its association with the pink triangle of the Nazi persecution era and also with present-day gay pride. The major intention for Trikon is to serve as a support group to free South Asian gays from their closets and offer them a liberation to strive for.

"South Asians tend to be very quiet," Kumar explained, "but for the sake of gayness, it is necessary to speak out." The speaking out has taken a number of different forms in the last year. One was marching in the Gay Pride Parade last June. Kumar was the state of the forms of the form remembers that their contingent was one of the last but still drew a strong response: "They really cheered when they saw us!"

Also, Trikon attended the People of Color Conference in Los Angeles and discovered an organization of South Asian lesbians. That inspired the formation of local groups in Los Angeles and Chicago, and gained coverage in India itself.

A major Indian slick magazine called Society, published in Bom-bay, carried the story of Trikon in the Gay Parade and had the basic facts about the organization. Publicity for gay South Asians in the U.S. has also come through the straight newspapers India Abroad in New York and India West, published in Emeryville. The latter carried a parade picture of Trikon on its front page. Trikon sent the same information to 50 Indian papers, but Kumar reports that they have no idea how much was actually printed.

Though response has been homophobic to a small degree, Kumar declared himself happy that acceptance has exceeded an tagonism. Tolerance has been the rule in the Bay Area South Asian community as a whole, he feels.

Financing and labors have been volunteer. Organization is loose, and procedures informal. Local groups coming into being are not bound by imposed authority and so may determine their own goals and activities, Kumar emphasized.

Definitions are not sharp. "We are not clear on how 'South Asia' is defined. We spend little time on distinctions,' Kumar said.

Consequently, though there is a focus on South Asia, anyone interested is welcome. Eighty South Asians in nine countrie are now participants, but 150 copies of the last issue of the newsletter were mailed, and the organization totals 200, many of whom are designated "friends," of other racial and national backgrounds.

Trikon is interested in network ing with other gay racial organizations and has cordial relations with Pacific Friends and Black and White Men Together, but Kumar asserted that Trikon is not primarily interested in bridges between cultures.

One of the most unusual and potentially ironic developments is the probability that gay libera-tion for Indians in India might have its wellspring in the U.S. In-quiries are being received here from Indians anxious to belong and to form their own groups in the subcontinent.

An early call for participation attracted a larger number of caucasians than it did South Asians. Kumar explained this development in two ways. First, there are more Americans than South Asians paying attention to such publicity. Also, many gay and lesbian South Asians are so closeted that they rarely see gay publications.

The caucasians who have stayed with the group have already developed an interest in South Asian culture, food, music, and art. Some had had Indian

Settlement Reached In Bias Complaint

A settlement has been reached in Dorr v. First Kentucky National Corporation, et al. Sam Dorr, a former branch manager of the First National Bank of Louisville, brought this religious discrimination suit in February, 1983.

Dorr, who was president of Dignity/Integrity chapter in Louisville, an organization of gay Episcopalians and Catholics, alleged that First National forc-ed his resignation because as president he would be a public spokesman on gay rights issues. In the suit, Dorr contended that his role as spokesman was based on his religious beliefs. First National contended that Dorr's ac-tivities were gay rights activities, not protected by the religious dis-crimination provisions of the civil rights laws.

Dorr's suit was dismissed by the U.S. District court for the Western District of Kentucky in Dec. 1983. Earlier this year, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit reversed the trial court and ordered it to reconsider Dorr's claim.

On Oct. 10, 1986, a majority of the active judges on the Sixth Circuit reheard Dorr's appeal, thereby vacating the panel's earlier order to send the case back to the trial court. The court ordered the parties to submit fur-ther briefs.

As part of the settlement of the lawsuit, Dorr has withdrawn his complaint of religious discrimination against First National and the other parties to the suit. The parties also reached a monetary settlement of their dispute in order to avoid further litigation.

Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc. represent-ed Dorr before the federal court of appeals.

Young Man On Fire

Once, He Was Harvey Milk's 'Sergeant Of The Streets.' Now, Cleve Jones Wants To Be On Board Of Supervisors

by Brian Jones

leve Jones is back. The Castro's quintessential angry young man still has the fire in his gut which flamed ten years ago as he led thousands down Market Street, mobilizing an army of lovers against Anita Bryant and John Briggs. Jones, now 32, was Harvey Milk's sergeant of the streets. Now he aspires to take up the mantle of Harvey Milk. Cleve Jones is running for supervisor in 1988.

"We desperately need a new vision, a vision of spiritual development and economic cooperation, to survive through the '90s," Jones said last week. "Where will it come from? For those of us who have been in the forefront of the movement to define how gay people should live, there has been a deafening silence since the AIDS epidemic began."

"We are going to have to learn how to work with each other and trust each other much more than we have in the past," Jones said. "We have a whole new generation of gay people coming up. What are we doing for them? How will we protect them? We must be willing to make individual sacrifices for the community as a whole."

As he spoke, Jones paced the floor of his flat and surveyed its commanding view of that political battleground called the Castro. The wider theater of San Francisco lay beyond. He considered the field like a lieutenant mapping his next move. He knows there is a war going on.

"We've got gay families and networks and social institutions which are still, to-day, very young. All of them are threatened by this epidemic. As the epidemic worsens, we will face even greater difficulties. We must have vision to survive the '90s,' Jones said.

NUTS AND BOLTS

ehind his vision is a solid stone wall of activism, built block by block over the past decade. Jones' history is one of the brightest threads running through the tapestry of the San Francisco gay movement.

He organized street support for Harvey Milk and against the Briggs initiative. As an aide to the Speakers of the Assembly, Leo McCarthy and Willie Brown, and later as an aide to Assembly Member Art Agnos, he lobbied for AB-1 for five years — and got the bill to the governor's desk.

And Jones helped to set up a one-room office on Castro Street in 1982 when a mysterious and terrifying disease began claiming gay men. Today the organization is called the San Francisco AIDS Foundation.

Cleve Jones, I, talks politics with Scott Smith, c, Harvey Milk's former lover, and a friend. (B.A.R. Photo/Brian Jones)

Jones left San Francisco in March, 1985. Embittered by the veto of AB-1 and stunned by the mounting number of deaths among his friends — and exhausted from ten years of activism — Jones retreated to Hawaii.

A year later he was in Sacramento, where he lobbied for the Society of Friends, commonly called the "Quakers." Jones lobbied on criminal justice issues for the Society, of which he is a member, having been raised a Ouaker. It was in Sacramento last summer that Jones was attacked one night as he walked to a convenience store for ice cream. In his scrap book, there with the photos of him and Harvey Milk, is a police photo of Cleve Jones lying face down in a pool of his own blood, a deep puncture in his back.

The retreat from San Francisco allowed him to reassess his goals and seek to unify his personal spiritual values with his desires for a political career. Beyond his vision, Jones sees practical planks of a political platform. Jones' vision for the San Francisco gay community focuses on the same issues which have dominated local politics since the Nineteenth Century: jobs, homes and economic security.

The AIDS epidemic threatens all of these, Jones said. For those losing their nomes, housing cooperatives are the answer. For those losing their economic security — through insurance discrimination — a gay self-insurance pool is the solution.

Insurance discrimination "is a problem I face in my own life," Jones said, "I am 32 years old and I can't get health insurance. We have got to put aside our rigid individualism if we are going to survive the "One" ast month, Jones filed his declaration of intent to run for supervisor in the 1988 city election. His filing allows him to immediately begin organizing his campaign and raising money. He is the first candidate to file.

EARLY START

"It may seem silly to file two years before the election. But it is equally bizarre that it costs a quarter of a million dollars to run for supervisor. And since my name is not Pelosi or Blum, I have to begin raising money now," Jones said.

(Nancy Pelosi is the candidate for Congress who is married to a millionaire developer. Richard Blum is the millionaire developer who is married to Mayor Dianne Feinstein.)

"My personal ambition is to be able to organize more and accomplish more for the gay community, and I view a career in politics as the way to achieve those goals;" Jones said. "I am particularly interested in delivering more to the gay community."

But Jones said, "I will not be running just on gay issues . . . a fundamental issue is that we must preserve what is most vital to this city: our neighborhoods. They are in jeopardy. The black community is being pushed out of San Francisco; the bluecollar community is being pushed out of San Francisco.

"Dianne Feinstein's plan is to convert this town to a home for the wealthy," Jones

Date Screening Called 'Scam'

Promotes False Security, Not Safe Sex, Say Critics

by Gerard Koskovich

A Silicon Valley entrepreneur has drawn sharp criticism for marketing an "AIDS negative" singles registry in the Bay Area and Seattle, with plans to expand nationwide if the pilot project returns a profit. AIDS risk-reduction educators and medical experts, however, condemned the venture as a "travesty" and a "clever scam."

"We are attempting to reach single, dating people of any sex and orientation," said John McAfee, founder and director of the Santa Clara-based American Institute for Safe Sex Practices. "Anyone who has multiple sex partners should be interested in this program."

According to McAfee, his firm is offering an identification card and "on-line data base" registry for singles who have received a negative HIV-antibody test from their personal physician within the preceding six months. The charge for an initial inscription and a date-stamped identity card featuring the words "AIDS negative" is $22

tive" is $22.

"We do not guarantee that all people in the program are free from AIDS, and we do not guarantee that sex with these people is safe," McAfee told the Bay Area Reporter "What we do say is that if you only have sex with card-carrying members of this program, your chances of contracting AIDS are substantially reduced."

McAfee plans to advertise his "Life Guard Screening Program" in heterosexual singles magazines in the Bay Area and Seattle. The self-described "computer entrepreneur and statistician," who has no medical background, added that he will expand his venture to other cities if the test marketing proves successful.

McAfee's enterprise drew a sharply critical reaction from Bay Area AIDS experts.

"Even if it's well-intentioned, it's stupid," remarked Clark Taylor, a professor at the Institute for the Advanced Study of Human Sexuality in San Francisco and a nationally-recognized expert in safer-sex education. "The only way to be safe is to take personal responsibility for your own behavior.

"It doesn't matter if someone else carries a card, swears on the Bible, or stands on their head," Taylor continued. "And frankly, it's a real travesty to call this program 'safe sex.' The possibility of false negatives means HIVantibody screening is not a 'safe sex' consideration.

"People's time and money would be better spent learning to use condoms properly and learning to enjoy no-risk sexual activities that don't involve penetration," Taylor added.

A San Jose-based representative of the American Red Cross echoed Taylor's remarks and disputed McAfee's statistical claims.

"The whole thing is a very clever scam," said Dr. J. Lawrence Naiman, director of blood services for the American Red Cross in Northern California. "It's much more important individually and for the public health for people to assume personal responsibility. This sort of program simply encourages them to continue willy-nilly with unsafe sex.

"A negative test result is an accurate indication of health status only if the individual hasn't engaged in any sexual activity involving exchange of body fluids for at least six months before the test," Naiman added. "The literature from [McAfee] hedges this fact in a very deceptive fashion."

Responding to Naiman's remarks, McAfee insisted that his statistical analysis was accurate.

"We certainly do not deny that to give a 100 percent guarantee, the person would have to abstain for six months" before the HIV-antibody test, McAfee admitted. "But we're not talking about 100 percent guarantees. We're talking about probabilities."

"The probability of someone having a contact six months ago and not having it show up is extremely low," he explained. "Dr. Naiman is actually distorting the statistics: most people will sero-convert within eight weeks to two months,"

Naiman likewise held his ground: "Our statements don't conflict statistically, but the bottom line is that most people do want a greater degree of assurance than this program can offer," he said. "I wouldn't want to gamble on statistics when it comes to a matter of life and death."

Taylor expressed concern about individuals who would receive a positive HIV-antibody result after deciding to join the "Life Guard" screening program.

"Unless one's personal physician is trained to counsel people with positive test results — which is unlikely — the consequences could be devastating," he said. "These cases can produce tremendous anxiety and stress."

McAfee has not revealed the number of people who have signed up for his program to date. In an interview Monday with the San Francisco Chronicle, he said that he hopes to enroll 20,000 participants in the next four months.

One woman who has decided to participate, identified only as "Kathy," told the Chronicle she joined two weeks ago to find "reassurance" in future relationships.

"I think it's kind of making a statement about yourself," she said. "People who will take the time to join an organization like this are obviously concerned and responsible to start with. It just narrows the danger down further."

Prof. Taylor offered a starkly different summation: "This program lulls such people into a false sense of security," he said. "And it distracts and delays them from studying and practicing real safe sex."

Rites of Spring Benefits OC

O.C., Inc., which raises funds for the Operation Concern clinic, will hold a dinner-dance Mar. 21 at the San Franciscan Hotel. There will be no-host cocktails at 6:30; dinner at 7:30; after-dinner remarks by Sup. Harry Britt, now a candidate for U.S. Congress; and dancing thereafter, until midnight.

The clinic, now in its 13th year, provides mental health services for lesbians, gay men, and their families. Aside from general services, it provides special groups for people with AIDS and for people with substance abuse problems. It's well-known for its GLOE program — Gay and Lesbian Outreach to Elders — which offers an array of services to the older gay population.

The benefit will be held in the hotel's ballroom. Tickets can be obtained by calling OC at 626-7000. They are $50 per person, and will be held at the door. Out-of-towners may be interested in staying at the hotel, which is offering a special single or double room rate of $45 for the night to those attending the benefit.

Van de Kamp Hails 'Handicap' Ruling By Supreme Court

State Attorney General John Van de Kamp hailed the Mar. 4, 7-2 United States Supreme Court decision which holds that persons suffering from certain communicable diseases such as tuberculosis are protected under a federal law that prohibits employers from discriminating on the basis of medical handicap. Van de Kamp was joined by officials of six other states in filing a friend-of-the-court brief in the case.

Van de Kamp said, "This ruling sends a strong signal to employers that AIDS sufferers may not be summarily dismissed based on their tragic affliction which medical authorities agree cannot be casually transmitted from the employee to others.'

Rejecting the position advocated by the United States Department of Justice, the Court accepted California's argument that to allow an employer to dis-criminate on the basis of un-founded fear about a disease's contagiousness would be incon-sistent with Congress' intent that handicapped individuals not be denied jobs because of prejudice or ignorance. The Court noted that Congress had intended to replace such fearful, reflexive reactions with decisions based on reasoned and medically sound judgments.

Van de Kamp argued that determinations regarding the risks posed by persons with com-municable diseases "must be based on reasonable medical judgments founded on the available medical evidence." "People who have diseases which are transmissible only through specific and limited means should not be denied employment since they pose no threat to the health of the community," he said.

The State's brief also noted that "premature terminations from productive employment deprives such persons of the abili-ty to provide for themselves and deprives society of their productivity, creating a double burden on the State."

Although the case involved a Although the case involved a teacher with tuberculosis, it has been widely watched for its impact on people with AIDS. The Attorney General entered the case in part to contest the U.S. Justice Department's position that employers could fire such persons if the decision was based on fear of contagion, no matter persons it the decision was based on fear of contagion, no matter how unreasonable. The Court's opinion did not deal directly with AIDS, but its rejection of the Justice Department's position will allow cases involving people with AIDS to be resolved on a case-by-case basis in the same manner as other cases involving people with disabilities, based solely on reasoned medical judg-

Under the premise "We are united by Divine Mandate to care for those with whom we live," the conference will focus on pastoral response to persons who are ill, rather than on issues of sexual morality. It is endorsed by every major faith group in the Bay Area and is sponsored by Archbishop John R. Quinn, Roman Catholic John R. Quini, Rollian Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco; Bishop William E. Dist. 8 Dems Back Britt

The District Eight Democratic Club has endorsed Sup. Harry Britt to succeed Sala Burton in San Francisco's Fifth Congressional District special election scheduled for April 7.

Demo Party activist Nancy Pelosi made a strong bid to gain the hotly-contested endorsement, but was beaten back on the fifth ballot when Britt managed to get the necessary 60 percent of the

The endorsement is seen as a key victory for Britt. The District Eight Democrats are an organization which was a part of the zation which was a part of the "Burton" Machine and has strong ties to organized labor. The club is drawn from grassroots activists in the old supervisorial District Eight which covered the Outer Mission and Visitacion Valley neighborhoods.

said. "I believe that people have the right to use any method at their disposal in order to preserve their homes."

. Jones favors extending the city's rent control ordinance to cover vacant units and commercial properties. He sees transportation as "a critical need which must be addressed in an overall fashion throughout the Bay Area."

He calls the city's land-use policies "bizarre."

"There is a hole in the ground where the International Hotel used to be. There is a hole in the ground where two blocks of the Western Addition used to be. There is a hole in the ground where the Straight Theatre on Haight used to be. And they have been holes in the ground for years," Jones said.

POLITICAL DISH

t is as a political tactician that Jones is most well known. His eyes brighten and his speech lightens when he is seduced into swapping the latest political dish.

"I support district elections but I am not hopeful that it will pass," said Jones, with the certainty of someone who has been through this twice before. "I anticipate running in a citywide race."

He expects other lesbian and gay candidates to be on the ballot and said, "I have no problem with that — I think that it is a positive side to our diversity and strength as a community."

The only case in which he would not run against another gay candidate is if district elections do pass, and he would face off against Harry Britt in the same district.

"I wouldn't oppose Harry because I agree with his voting record," Jones said. But Jones doesn't anticipate such a scenario — he believes Britt will probably win the special election for Congress.

While his campaign gears up, Jones is busy with a project for this fall's national march on Washington. Called the Names Project, it is an effort to encourage everyone who has lost a friend to AIDS to join in a massive and colorful national memorial.

The name of each person lost to AIDS will be memorialized by family and friends on a six-foot by three-foot panel of fabric. "It can be embroidered or spray-painted or sewn in sequins, on leather or lace or lame," Jones said. Just before the march, the panels will be sewn into one huge tapestry.

"At dawn on Oct. 11 we are going to roll it out and it will cover the Capitol Mall," Jones said. "Can you imagine the impact of it? "But this is going to be more than just a media thing," he added. "I see it as gay and straight people coming together to create these things in a healing ritual."

Jones paused, then smiled. "I can't wait to schedule the networks' helicopters for the fly-over," he said. The star of two CBS News specials clearly is relishing his next role.

"You know, they call me the media queen, and that's all right. You see me on CBS but you also see me out there on Castro Street, stapling flyers to every pole in sight. That's what it's all about."

SEIU Joint Council Endorses Britt

San Francisco's largest union, the Joint Council of Service Employees International Union, AFL-CIO, with 25,000 members in the city, has endorsed Sup. Harry Britt for election to the Fifth Congressional District seat left vacant by the death of Sala Burton.

Included in SEIU membership are some 13,000 city and school employees represented by Locals 790, 250 and 535.

According to Council President Paul Varacalli, Britt earned the endorsement by "his long record of leadership on issues of importance to Organized Labor and the working people of San Francisco. Whether it's pay equity or creating new job opportunities, Sup. Britt has been there when we needed him."

Varacalli notes it wasn't a cut and dried decision. "Many of the other candidates also have impressive credentials, and we've worked with them in other capacities. But, only one of them can fill this seat in Congress and, after careful consideration, the majority of our affiliates concluded Britt was someone we could all unite to support."

Benefit for Britt

A house party benefit for Sup. Harry Britt's campaign for Congress will be held by Ralph Payne on Saturday, Mar. 14, from 7-9 p.m. at 1950 Pierce St., at California. Tickets are available at $10, $25, $50 and $100. For more information, call 929-1591.

Sheriff Hennessey Endorses Britt

San Francisco Sheriff Mike Hennessey gave his formal endorsement to Sup. Harry Britt for the 5th Congressional District seat previously held by the late Sala Burton. A special election called by the Governor will be held on April 7.

Hennessey cited Britt's many years of legislative experience and public service as a member of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, and his longstanding involvement in a host of issues affecting 5th Congressional District voters.

"Sup. Britt has the philosophy and the consistent voting record which most closely reflects the leadership of our late Congresspersons Philip and Sala Burton.

"His steadfast support of civil rights, blue collar labor issues and his demonstrated leadership in the fight for sufficient AIDS funding leads me to conclude that Harry will make an outstanding congressman for the people of San Francisco."

%%%%%%%%%%Alice Loves Harry

The Alice B. Toklas Lesbian/ Gay Democratic Club cordially invites you to a reception to support Harry Britt, our candidate for Congress. It will be held Thursday, Mar. 12, at The San Franciscan Hotel, 1231 Market Street at 8th, 5 to 8 p.m. (hors d'oeuvres, no-host cocktails). Donations are $25, $50, and $100. Robert Michael Flaherty

Robert Flaherty was a gentleman. On March 4, he died in his Lyon Street home with great dignity and grace. With him to the end were his lover, Lefkos Aftonomos, his sisters Doris Flaherty of San Francisco and Patricia Clark of London, and parents Jean and Vincent Flaherty of Troy, MI. He is also survived by a daughter, Catilin, of Buffalo. He died of AIDS at age 44.

Robert was one of the visionaries, designers and very proud owners of the Hayes Street Grill and Vicolo Pizzerias. Earlier, he had practiced law with Orrick, Herrington and Sutrington and Sut-cliffe, and then Robert was a generous, intelligent man with a high level of social consciousness. He valued old-fashioned traditions but he also enjoyed exploring the new and avant garde. He was never judgmental. He ap preciated diversity and individuality.

In the days ahead, we will think of Robert often. When listening to opera, eating our way through Tuscany, noticing an attractive man or looking at an ex-quisite bouquet of flowers, we'll remem-ber Robert.

He was a gift that we were all grateful to have in our lives.

He did more than bring a lot to the party; he was the party.

OUTRAGEOUS OLIO

itches In Black II" (at Bjornson Hall last Saturday night) had everything going for it. The individual numbers were well re-hearsed. The timing from segment to segment was almost per-fect. The lights and sound were great. The selection and variety of musical numbers had some-thing for everyone and the per-formers were most certainly "up." The "real" stage allowed the audience to see everything. The booze was of good quality and the prices were reasonable. It was almost the perfect evening of entertainment.

But, in all events of this type there has to be The Sterling, The Sordid, and The Squally.

The Sterling: From the opening ensemble — the theme from Best Little Whorehouse in Texas — to the hand-holding closing of What the World Needs Now is Love, all the performers were ex-Love, all the performers were ex-cellent. To single out any one or two individuals would be like choosing two favorite children from a family of 12. Each was unique and lived up to his/her own merit. The hours of rehear-sal was obvious, and the finished results nearly perfection.

Mention has to be made, how-ever, of guest star Maxine Wel-don. Without any accompani-ment (a cappella if you will) Maxment (a cappella if you will) Maxine belted out a couple of songs that had the walls and rafters

Plaudits and kudos to Emperfriaudits and kidos to Emper-or VIII David and the entire cast for a most outstanding and enter-taining evening. Hugs and kisses to all who gave of their time, ef-fort, and money. An approximate total of $5,830 was announced. This will be divided between East Bay Assistance Fund and Adopt-

A-House.

The Sordid: Why is it that some performers can't remember—or maybe they have never been taught—the rule of "never get out of character"? It was extremely disturbing to witness someone on stage giving their all while other "entertainers" were in the back of the auditorium—either just having finished or waiting to go on—having their own party and not paying attention to what was going on, on the stage. ing on, on the stage.

And it's a pity that some of those who came to see, should have come to see and not be seen! The noise and din coming from the bar was totally unnecessary, and quite distracting to the audience and the performer(s). Unfortunately, when they vacated the stage, they forgot the disruptions and became a part of them!

Even Maxine's several tempts to quiet the disorders fell on deaf ears because the mouths on deaf ears because the mouths were too busy working a mile a minute on idle chatter and prattle. It's too bad that Mama Chuckles' closing statement about "Memory is Love" didn't equate to the "I'm here to be seen's" remembering common courtesy to those on the stage. The attention given reminded me of a Sophomore Class meeting!

The Squally: 'Tis a pity that the behind-the-scenes rehearsing fostered some bit of animosity, resulting in someone being called "Little Hitler"! Show Biz is Show Biz, but petty struggles for "power" need not be a part of this kind of endeavor.

Fortunately, a cool, simpatico head remained during the credits. Much to-do could have been made as to the why's and wherefore's of Robert's not performing. David handled the "tension" very well.

Alameda County To Ban AIDS Bias

County Adopts Response Plan; Discrimination Ordinance Under Review

by Charles Linebarger

Alameda County supervisors made the first moves at their Atameda County supervisors made the first moves at their meeting on Feb. 24 toward approving a new ordinance which would ban discrimination against people with AIDS throughout the county. At the suggestion of Sup. John George of Oakland the board voted 4-0, with Sup. Charles Santana of Hayward abstaining, to ask its attorney to draft a law prohibiting discrimination in housing and employment against people with AIDS.

George told Bay Area Reporter that he believed the proposed law would come up for a vote by the board at its meeting Mar. 24. 'It's definitely likely to be passed;' he said.

Brian Cross of the county health department said that of the six cities in California with statutes protecting people with AIDS from discrimination, three were in Alameda County—"Ber-keley, Oakland, and Hayward. The county is considering passing a law to cover the unincorporated areas."

The action by the board on the AIDS discrimination law was one of several passed to deal with the spreading AIDS epidemic in this county. The meeting itself came just weeks after a county report predicted that the number of AIDS cases in Alameda County would jump from its current level of 338 cases to more than 3,500 cases by the year 1990.

The county supervisors also adopted an AIDS Response Plan which calls for new surveillance measures for people with AIDS and increased education on safe

"Surveillance has a special meaning in epidemiology," said Cross, "it's a method of keeping track of and identifying those with the disease. AIDS is a reportable disease. It's the maintenance of the records.

The board also asked its staff The board also asked its start to conduct a survey of public attitudes and knowledge about AIDS. A resolution was called for that would term AIDS a preventable disease. In addition Sup. Bob Knox told the board that he would attempt to arrange an AIDS summit for officials from the entire nine county Bay Area, to discuss ways the region can deal with the epidemic.

"We've been asked to set the agenda for this conference; 's said Cross, "We're looking for things that would be of value for the whole region. Things like the number of in-patient beds in the

On the call for a survey of the public's attitudes and knowledge about AIDS, Cross said that that would be very expensive. "A number of people have suggested that the money could be better spent elsewhere."

Cross said that increased edu-cation would be taking place in the schools in Alameda County on AIDS. Children in grades 7 to 12 would have one hour of school time set aside to discuss AIDS and ways to avoid it.

"We believe AIDS is preventable," said Cross, "and we feel the Board of Supervisors should take affirmative action on this, possibly supporting the condom ads on television. When we say AIDS is a preventable disease, we're obviously saying something about condoms and safe sex."

Arson Destroys Clear Lake Bar

by Charles Linebarge

Tuesday night, Mar. 3, was like any other night at "The Cabaret" in Glenhaven. Half a dozen customers were lingering around the bar or listening to the house's prized George Wright organ. Then some persons unknown decided to burn the place down.

The Cabaret is the only gay bar in the small resort town (population 500) on Clear Lake in Northern California's Lake County. Glenhaven, according to one of the Cabaret's co-owners, Charles Georgedes, is a center of the gay life in Lake County. The town boasts five gay resort lodges and about twenty homes owned by gay people.

The fire began around 9:30 p.m. that Tuesday. "One of our customers smelled something burning," recalled Georgedes. "The people in the bar then went into the back patio and found a wall burning. They threw water on it but that just splattered the fire. There must have been something incendiary in it."

Detective Rodger Smith of the Lake County Sheriff's Department is investigating the case. "It appears to be arson," he told Bay Area Reporter. "We don't have any suspects."

Asked whether he expected to find any suspects, Smith responded, "I should hope so." But he added, "I haven't been able to get out of the office in the last week to investigate it."

Smith told B.A.R. that an apparently flammable liquid was used to start the fire but some of the burned materials still need to be tested by the crime lab to prove that.

"I assume there may be some people who might be against their cause," said Smith when asked whether he had any likely suspects. "There's no gay movement but that's the predominantly gay area of Lake County. There's no problem with the neighbors in Glenhaven but there was a rumor that they planned on moving the bar and maybe those people did it, the neighbors where they planned to move the bar."

According to Smith, $200,000 damage was done by the fire to the building housing The Cabaret.

PLAY THE GAME

The Cabaret had been in business as a gay bar for almost five years, according to Georgedes. "Prior to that we operated a straight bar in Lakeport, the county seat here. But they chased us out of there. People talked about us. It's unbelievable what happens in small towns. So we decided to pick up our license and move. Since we had the name we decided to play the game, so we opened a gay bar."

Georgedes said that Herb Caen wrote the Cabaret up when it opened causing a deluge of visitors for a while. But after a time business leveled off. "It hasn't been easy," said Georgedes.

The fire did about $20,000 in damage to the bar, according to Georgedes, but he and his partner had insurance covering only $10,000 of the loss. "The fire burned the building down, including our favorite organ with pipes, which had once been owned by George Wright, the famous American organist."

Georgedes said that he and his partner hoped to reopen their bar in the nearby town of Clear Lake Cove, about three miles from Glenhaven. Unfortunately, the prospective neighbors in Clear Lake Cove have passed around a petition asking that the two men be denied a liquor license in their town.

"I know the Glenhaven and Clear Lake Merchant's Associations are behind us," said Georgedes. "They know what we've done for the area. We bring people in here who spend money, and they have a fifteen percent unemployment rate here. But it's AIDS. That's what has brought it on, I'm sure, because they never protested the license before. They say, 'We don't want the gays here with all the AIDS and that crap."

Koop

Koop said that he had spoken before "just about every type of group in the country about AIDS" in the last year. "We all agreed about one thing," said the bearded, bespectacled surgeon general. "The best weapon against this disease is education."

Koop has come under attack from conservatives for his stand in favor of sex education in public schools. He said he had initially included the words "early elementary school" as the level he would like to start sex education.

"Initially, I mentioned kindergarten," Koop said. "Now, I would take out — albeit reluctantly — one word, 'early.' Some people have said AIDS education should begin no later than grade 7. I agree with them. I would like to see it in grades lower than that, at the fifth or sixth grade level, but it would still be up to the local community standards, as it should be."

Parents should be responsible for teaching children about AIDS and different levels of sex education, according to Koop. But the 70-year-old doctor who was appointed by Pres. Ronald Reagan six years ago said one of the difficulties about parental-child sex education conferences is getting the parent or parents to focus on their own relationships.

"Parents must understand their own relationships," Koop emphasized. "If they don't feel good about their own relationship, is it any wonder that parents have trouble telling their children about relationships?"

Koop said that if kids cannot get proper sex education in the home, "it is up to the schools, churches and synagogues to do the educating of the kids."

Koop's statements seemed to be a ringing endorsement of a recent position on sex education by Bill Honig, California state superintendent of public instruction. Honig has been under fire from 32 legislators, mostly conservative Republicans, for endorsing impartial hetero- and homosexual sex education in California schools. In his published report about AIDS, Koop said that "there is no doubt that we need sex education in schools and that it must include information on heterosexual and homosexual relationships." In his public statements, Koop has continually emphasized compassion for gay people.

Baltimore's address to the legislature focused in on the educational role of the media, specifically through advertising. "The television networks are responsible in educating the public," said Baltimore. "The condom manufacturers are willing to advertise their products. The TV networks must allow those ads and more.

"If education is to succeed (in preventing AIDS)," Baltimore added, "we must use every tool available."

Baltimore said the need for better education about AIDS was due to the estimates of projected cases. "We estimate that there will be 30,000 cases of AIDS in the United States in the next year with another 1-2 million becoming infected," said Baltimore. "Simple mathematics indicates that by 1991 we are looking at a quarter-million cases of AIDS, and that estimate may be low."

Baltimore called for "compassion, not incarceration" of people with AIDS. "Mandatory testing and quarantining of individuals are counterproductive moves," said Baltimore. "These kinds of actions are remindful of the days of the McCarthy Era or the internment of Japanese-Americans in camps during World War II."

In perhaps his most controversial statement of the day, Baltimore called for sterile needles for people who are still using drugs. He also said that "we must have condom dispensers in every restroom."

The speeches by Koop and Baltimore were part of a three-day trip to Northern California which was sponsored by Assemblyman Art Agnos. The day before the speeches, Koop and Baltimore toured San Francisco's Coming Home Hospice. On Friday, Mar. 5, Koop addressed the Bay Area Researchers' Conference on Women, Children, and AIDS at a San Francisco breakfast.

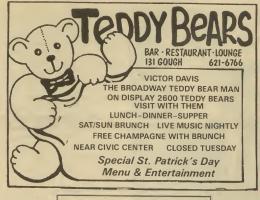

Agnos, who had two AIDS discrimination bills vetoed by Gov. George Deukmejian last year, is gearing up for another bill concerning AIDS discrimination, AB 87. The bill would revise definitions of "physically disabled" and "physically handicapped" and "physically handicapped people with respect to public accommodations, housing and employment. The bill would also protect students with AIDS from being excluded from public schools. It requires a sex education course in public schools about "the causes and effects of AIDS."

Baltimore called AB 87 "a very good step" in fighting AIDS, "but it is only a step."

Two Legends and the Chorus In 'A Night to Remember'

by Philip Campbell

f you're gay and, as the French say, "of a certain age," then you must have seen or at least heard of Barbara Cook and Charles Pierce by now. If you place low on the Kinsey scale, however, you just missed a terrific chance to come all the way out when these two enduring stars appeared in a benefit for Golden Gate Performing Arts, Inc. at Louise M. Davies Symphomy Hall.

The event was a real high-water mark for the financially beleagured San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus and thoroughly deserved the title "A Night to Remember." La Pierce even renamed the hall "Marion Davies" place," receiving the kind of worshipful response the Pope can only dream of.

This was the splashiest possible season opener for the Chorus and, with wisdom and respect, they willingly took a back seat to their two fabulous headliners. Musical Director Gregg Tallman and his own legendary crew provided the connective tissue between star turns, creating a sturdy backbone for a long show that still left them begging for more.

Charles Pierce continues to dazzle with familiar material because his act is basically about love and shared experience. No one can get a bigger laugh simply by walking to center stage. Topical references and new character assassinations like Vanna White and Pia Zadora, along with a devastating romp in Joan

Collins drag, keep the jokes fresh, and Pierce revels in each raunchy bit as though it were the first time.

No matter how low the shot or vulgar the comic image, he makes it clear that he shares our affection for the famous women he satirizes. What could easily become sexist bad taste in other, less talented hands, leaves us helpless with laughter. When they staged the first drag show, Charles Pierce bought the balloons, but judging from the shape those famous legs are in, he should still be knocking them dead on the first space shuttle.

ith an amazing 35-year career, spanning the glorious heyday of American musicals, Barbara Cook is another survivor who shows no sign of diminished capacity. If anything, her voice is stronger than ever. That beautiful, vibratofree sound pours out in a warming torrent, lending credibility to the slightest of lyrics.

Now a formidable presence, physically and vocally, the once-diminutive ingenue of the forgotten "Flahooley" went on to create the dreamily idealistic Marian the Librarian of The Music Man, avaricious Cunegonde in the ultimate cult musical Candide, and the sweetly hopeful Amalia Balash in She Loves Me. Barbara Cook's singing portrayals represent a high point in Broadway history, and nowshe is fulfilling a career decision made in the 1970s when she became a concert and club artist of the classiest sort.

I can actually recall her unfeigned surprise at the adoring response engendered by her first solo appearances. Now she sails on without a trace of nerves and within minutes has the old fans glancing at the new ones with pleased and knowing smiles.

ince the energy onstage and off at "A Night to Remember" was so full of happiness and good will, it might seem churlish to point out that the Chorus was well under their best form, but it was a Gay Men's Chorus event, and for the most part, their choice of music and presentation was weak. I can't understand how that many voices can sound so thin.

The new sound tent over the stage has only worsened matters acoustically, but that still doesn't excuse the dubious treat of hearing "Puttin' On the Ritz" and a wimpy rendition of Bernstein's "New York, New York?' Gregg Tallman must take the rap for choosing bad arrangements, which do little to showcase the wealth of talent at his disposal.

On the definite plus side, the men got on and off with lightning speed, clearing up an old tedious problem, and the clever medley of songs introduced by Barbara Cook called "We Can Cook Too" was charming. The skimpy program notes did not include the name of a former Chorus member who penned a lovely song.

given its premiere that night, but then the culprit responsible for the Western number remained anonymous too.

When the guys cut loose and take chances as they did in the prolonged finale, the results are marvellous. A stalwart barbershop quartet singing "Lida Rose" with the luscious counterpoint of Cook's "Will I Ever Tell you?" led directly into an allstops-out "San Francisco" crowned by the appearance of Charles Pierce as Jeanette McDonald. The monumental soprano of Barbara Cook, the sight of the Gay Men's Chorus—granddaddy of them all—and Pierce in a picture hat! That's a lot of legends for one stage, and Marion Davies' place will never be the same.

The Inferno of Spookhouse by Robert Frank ante's Inferno is "a picture of our family," from the point of view of an agonized and confused 14-year-old girl who is being swept into adulthood before her time by baptism of fire in a fragmented family being consumed in a maelstrom of emotion and misfortune. There is flailing and wailing and gnashing of teeth in this familial inferno. Fire is also a metaphor in Harvey Fierstein's 1984 play, Spookhouse, now being produced for the first time in San Francisco by Theatre Rhinocerus.

The setting is a decayed, and still decaying, Coney Island ("Sewer by the Sea"), whose midway-amusement park area has witnessed successive incarnations throughout this century: "Dreamland," destroyed by fire; then "Luna Park," destroyed by fire; then "Steeplechase Park," destroyed by finance; now "Astroland," a smaller, deteriorating midway, a far cry from the "glory" of the past. In this area is a remnant of the past, the Spookhouse, a house of horrors with its mechanical objects and dummies jumping out at customers in the dark. The Janik Family runs the Spookhouse and lives

The family has heavy financial, personal, and emotional problems to which we gain insight only bit by bit. The first act is, at first, humorous and witty with a New York/Brooklyn accent and also sarcastic with a distinct edge of mistrust and unfriendliness on the part of the 34-year-old mother, Connie, who had babies "popping out at 16" is now a fortune teller (her technique with a customer: "Gotta start wid guilt an' woik my way up.") with money problems ("If somebody stiffs me, what 'm I gonna do, repossess their future?"). She blurts out in a flash of annoyance to her unwanted visitor, a polite, well-dressed, idealistic young social worker, Sam, "Ya so damn polite! Whaddaya queer?" Then "I just thought you were Jewish," she adds more calmly. Having offered him no refreshment, her response to his request for a glass of water: "Hot or cold?" Later on she screams, "Ya got Mary Poppins up ya ying-yang."

The conflict between matriarch and social worker as to which force determines the future of this family simmers slowly but steadily in the first act. The boiling point is reached in the second act with all its fiery sound and fury. The emotional fireworks are fueled by the conflicts among the family members and the conflict between the family and society's well-intentioned but imperfect welfare system personified by Sam. There is blame for all, but no one is to blame. No good guys, no bad guys, but limited, flawed human beings.

The core of this fiery piece is the character Connie, played with seemingly empathetic passion by Carla Befera. There are moments in the beginning when she seems Streisand-ish, but before long she's more like Medea than like a pseudo-gypsy Fanny Brice or Doris in The Oul and the Pussyeat. While she looked too good and too young to have gone through such a mill, Befera made up for that little flaw with her passionate performance. The other main character, Sam, was played by Steve Abel (seen earlier this season at Theatre Rhino in Life of the Party) in a controlled, effective, and realistic portrayal of a sincere, idealistic, not always wise, young man, who is also gay. The New York/Brooklyn accents, inflections, and cadences of Befera and Abel are so rich and real (but not overdrawn for comedy shtick), you could serve them (Continued on page 37)

Public Dreams: McDowell and Kanemoto

by Mark I. Chester

ompelled. Driven. Haunted. I see it in the faces of filmmaker Curt McDowell and photographer Lisa Kanemoto. These are artists who speak from the heart. They slice themselves open for public view. The act is rich and scary, for our most personal possession is the way in which we perceive the world around us. In two current photographic shows, McDowell and Kanemoto continue their public dreaming.

Curt McDowell is best known for his filmic tales of sexploration that are as stunning for their confrontation of sex and sexual values as for their stylistic intensity and flights of madness. But, the films McDowell has publicly released are only a portion of his total creations. There are diaries, scrapbooks, partial films, and more we will probably never see.

Something you can see are McDowell's photomontages now on display at Eye Gallery, 758 Valencia, until March 29. These photographs, comprised of actually many photographs laid overlapping one another, are at their heart color snapshots. They are the kind of pictures we all take, almost on reflex, to capture or snip out a moment from the toofast moving train of life. They are filled with the streets we walk, the people we know, and the places we call home, or temporarily claim as home.

Noting that he was stimulated by his mom, who took multiple pictures of large family gatherings which she then pasted together, McDowell has allowed his filmmaker's eye to wander, following tangential lines of thought and composition. The end result, not boxed by a rectangular frame, is free-flowing and alive.

You can only take this amount of space in a photograph at this close a distance by using a panoramic camera or a special lens. A panoramic camera takes a long narrow picture, sweeping almost 180 degrees. A fish eye lens, for example, can take up to 360 degrees, but the relative distances and sizes end up being extremely distorted. And yes, as McDowell sweeps his camera from side to side and up and down, the angle to which his camera is tilted creates a constantly changing sense of depth that challenges our perception of the photograph's flat, two dimensional surface. Certain sections seem to almost thrust themselves toward us. McDowell uses the still camera as though it were a movie camera, and in so doing creates a "moving" still picture.

There is no grand political statement here. McDowell has no secrets of the universe to reveal, except, maybe, that he lives his life as art and that art can come from even the most simple, passing moments of our lives.

hotographer Lisa Kanemoto is best known for her recent book of portraits from the gaylesbian community entitled We Are. Her current show, A San Francisco Love Affair, is on display at the Hatley-Martin Gallery, 41 Powell St., until April 4. Where McDowell turned the camera back onto himself and his life, Kanemoto explores herself by exploring the depth and range of the community she lives in, especially those elements she does not understand.

The 29 black and white photographs on display were all taken in several areas of San Francisco, representing various elements of San Francisco's population mixture. They focus on, for the most part, single or dual portraits. They are solid, well-crafted examples of fine art photographic portraiture, done on location. Kanemoto's gift may be her gentle openness that allows her subjects to relax and feel comfortable so that they reveal inner truths for her camera.

This sensitivity, along with a good technical sense of warm full-ranged tonal values and a creative use of environmental elements as compositional forms, shine through the work on exhibit. Unfortunately, the show is too heavily weighted towards work Kanemoto has done in the gayllesbian community and the Asian community to truly be a San Francisco photo essay. This is further complicated by the fact that all but two of the photographs were taken between 1979 and 1983. There is much more work for Kanemoto to do before this project can be completed.

There are photographs in this exhibition that are as good as photography gets. A young woman in vague repose at a public pool, her clouded expression set off by tiles that run at an angle away from the viewer. A young Asian man in front of an open garage door with a rope door closer that hangs ominously like a hangman's noose behind the young man's morose expression. And the best photograph in the show, equal to Diane Arbus' or Weegee's best, is of those ubiquitous middle-aged female twins on Powell Street, in matching outfits, down to the makeup, earrings, and gloves, smiling absolutely identical smiles like they were doing a Doublemint commercial, having a ball as if they were teens, while laughing at themselves, in front of a Powell St. bakery, under a sign that reads "Cheesecake." It is worth the trip to see just that one photograph.

But where McDowell was haunted and excited by his sexual/artistic explorations, I sometimes feel Kanemoto is just haunted. There are moments when the look on Kanemoto's face reminds me of the look on the faces of dying young men. Or the look I imagine Jews had as they were marched towards concentration camps in Germany during World War II.

If Kanemoto could share this sense of being haunted with the world, it might be her greatest gift yet. She has dreams that cry to be shared with the world.

Award Films

by David-Alex Nahmod

ward Films is a Los Angeles-based film and video company that deals mainly with gay cinema. Literally dozens of gay-themed films from all over the world have been made available in this country due to their efforts, films that were considered unmarketable by major distributors. Although their films occasionally play in theaters, it is through the home video market that most of their business is conducted. Many titles in the Award Films catalogue can be rented from Superstar Video (18th Street, near Noe) or Captain Video (Market, off Castro), among other outlets.

For a complete Award Films catalogue, write to: 525 North Laurel Ave., LA, CA 90048.

And now, a sampling of what you can expect from Award Films.

YOU ARE NOT ALONE (1981) Directed by Lasse Nielsen

A sensitive and sweet film from Denmark, You Are Not Alone stretches credibility a bit, but its few minor script flaws are easy to overlook in the light of its satisfying emotional content.

The setting of the film is an all boys' boarding school in the country. Bo, a surprisingly mature youth, is one of the school's prize students. When he comes across two nude boys making out in the shower, he good naturedly tells them he thinks it's OK to like boys as well as girls.

Kim is the incredibly beautiful child of the school's stern principal. He has no relationship with his father, who's as cold as ice and runs the school as though it were a prison camp. The stories of You Are Not Alone are of Bo leading the students of the school in a strike against their tyrannical leader, and of the love he finds with Kim.

The love between the two boys is as pure as a love can be. They accept their desire to be together as a casual matter of fact, and spend many playful afternoons walking across the lush countryside hand in hand. There's a humorous shower scene in which they ask each other whether or not they wash their penises, but the overall feeling is that this love affair is a platonic one, for now.

Some credibility is lost in a scene where a student film is screened at the school for parents and teachers. The film consists of a long, slow-motion shot of Kim and Bo removing their shirts and kissing full on the lips. It's a lovely shot, but I couldn't believe a roomful of straight parents would be willing to quietly watch this. Still, You Are Not Alone is one of the best "feel good" movies for gays around.

It's a beautiful nostalgia journey for those who wish to recapture their youth.

THE ORPHANS (1983) Directed by Nicholas Gubenko

Not a gay film, but still an interesting viewing experience, The Orphans is one of the few Russian features to be released in this country. In releasing The Orphans, Award keeps in tune with its policy of handling so-called "unmarketable" titles. At Superstar Video, the film was creatively displayed, along with several films about Russia and a few antinuke films, under the heading "Alternative viewing to ABC's Amerika"

A simple story, it follows a young boy's day to day life in a Russian orphanage shortly after the end of World War II. The Orphans shows how he deals with the loss of his family and of his new life in a cold and strange environment. It's a bleak and somber film, made a bit difficult to follow due to its mediocre English dubbing. But in this age of hateful propaganda pieces like Amerika, it's important that we see films like The Orphans to show us that Russians are people,

THE BEST WAY (1978) Directed by Claude Miller

What this French film is about is a total mystery. I think it was meant to be about an obsessive, unconsummated love, but the story's original intent appears to have gotten lost in the telling.

Soft-spoken, effeminate Phillippe (Patrick Bouchitey) is a drama counselor at a boys' summer camp. One night, butch "he-man" Marc (Patrick Dewaere), another counselor and an annoying jerk, catches Phillippe in drag. From that moment on, the two are obsessed with each other, Phillippe with emulating Marc, and Marc with tormenting Phillippe. Fag jokes abound.

Phillippe has a prim and proper girlfriend whom he cannot get hard with, and eventually he offers Marc a blow job. The two finally have a violent outburst in which Marc is stabbed.

Suddenly and without warning or reason, five years have past. Phillippe and his girlfriend are happily married, and the yuppified couple are fondly renewing their friendship(?) with Marc.

New Oldies and Old Goodies

OLD STARS FALL, NEW STARS RISE Chris Isaak (Warner Bros.)

Chris Isaak is a strikingly handsome man with a haunting and melancholy voice. He's become quite popular on the club/concert circuit, and this debut album should increase his popularity and insure him a place in the music business for years to come.

This is the kind of music one listens to on a lonely night. When your heart is breaking from the aftershock of a bad love affair and you want to listen to music that mirrors how you feel, turn to Isaak's album. His voice is filled with sad passion few singers can equal.

Chris Isaak is simply produced. There are no backup singers, and very few instrumentals other than guitar, base and drums. The voice stands out and takes center stage, as it should

It's a fine, fine album. It reminded me of Presley's best, but with thought and intellect replacing the overproduction that sometimes hampered Elvis' style. And Christ has a better voice.

AUGUST Eric Clapton (Warner Bros.)

Clapton is looking and sounding surprisingly tired on this Phil Collins-produced LP. On most cuts his voice is drowned out by the loud, abrasive music, making most of the lyrics inaudible. What we do hear is boring, because the singer sounds bored.

Even the electrifying Tina Turner, who joins Clapton on "Tearing Us Apart" and "Hold On" can't seem to help. We've all known for a long time what a powerful voice Tina has. Why, then, did the studio mixers bring her voice down, and bring the annoying, redundant instrumentals up, up, and up? It would have been nice to be able to understand the lyrics Tina was singing.

August also features "It's In the Way You Use It," an exasperating song that's heard in the film The Color of Money. I haven't seen the film, so I can't judge it, but I can be sure that this pointless, annoyingly repetitious song is not one of its selling points.

Eric Clapton has long been a musical force to be reckoned with. How said that he's fallen on such hard times.

FORBIDDEN TONES Lou Ann Barton (Spindletop Records)

Lou Ann Barton has a trendy look about her that suggests that she'd be right at home in a place like Club 9, which would be a perfect setting for her act. Her music has rock and roll arrangements that nicely compliment her strong, countryish voice.

The songs have simple, perfectly rhymed lyrics, and Lou Ann puts her all into lost-love ballads like "Tear Me Apart." This self-produced LP is not going to set any musical precedents, but it's a light, enjoyable entertainment.

There's talent in Lou Ann Barton, So give her first album a try.

LOOK AGAIN Jade and Sarsaparilla

Jade and Sarsaparilla are two women from Boston who developed quite a following on the East Coast in the '70s. Their real names are Janet Hood and Linda Langford, and they were deeply in love.

This self-produced LP is the only album they ever recorded. It was also self-distributed, mainly in the East, so not many people got to hear it. What a shame.

Jade and Sarsaparilla have got amazing voices. The gut-wrenching power of their singing will chill you.

They took an old rock classic, "It's Gonna Take a Miracle," and made it their own. With a much slower arrangement, and no instrumentals other than a piano, they belted the song out as though it were the ultimate torch song. It works beautifully.

Other songs include "Gimme a Pigfoot," a jazzy Cotton Clubstyled number, and "I Need a Drink of Water In My Mind," a story about women in love.

Janet and Linda are no longer together, so Jade and Sarsaparilla perform no more. This album is a beautiful tribute to them that deserves to be rediscovered.

You can still get Jade and Sarsaparilla at several local used record shops, including the Record Finder on Noe. It's expensive but worth i.

The Russians Are Here!

he ACT production of Chekhov's The Seagull makes it abundantly clear that this is a great play. That it does so despite some difficulties is credit to the life force of its actors, the vigorous direction by Jerome Kilty, and a beautiful physical production, with sets by Richard Seger and costumes by Robert Fletcher. This is the sort of play ACT does well. We certainly can't expect any other local theater to mount Chekhov as successfully or sumptuously. Perhaps that is what allows us to embrace the evening as a whole without being disconcerted by its questionable elements.

The Seagull is a Russian round of unrequited love in which at least six people yearn passionately for someone who yearns in turn for another. This chain of emotions among artists is used to explore what makes a creative artist, and also to find the effect, or value, of art on our lives—how it can or cannot transform, fulfill or explain life. It is richly operatic melodrama of a high order, with a ruined heroine, a glamorous and successful novelist, a brilliant actress, and a suicidally despairing young artist in the center.

It's perhaps more difficult than other Chekhov plays to do, since it demands not merely the famous indirect action in which the character's inner life must be made manifest on the stage with little overt action, but a wealth of incredulous symbols and shootings which even Chekhov abhored but had not yet learned how to forgo. His partisanship of Maeterlinck's symbolist dramas and Zola's school of realism led to his synthesizing both in unparalleled fashion in The Seagull, a feat he achieved with obvious transparency. What a wonder to see and hear!

The ACT Seagull engages all this full tilt, with the speed and brilliance that earmarks a modern production of Chekhov—no belabored doom and gloom here. Chekhov called it a comedy to focus on the characters' foibles in living instead of their ultimate fate, and Kilty capitalizes on that. He makes even the characters' ennui urgent, and from the slow song for a summer's eve that gorgeously opens the play through the mounting frenzy of delusion and frustration which throws the characters to their destinies, Kilty enables the rich human comedy to emerge.

This despite some controversial casting in two key roles. Hope Alexander-Willis is fascinating as the siren/actress Arkadina without ever once displaying (beside a surface beauty) the source of her bewitchery. Alexander-Willis has had great success playing vulgarians, slightly less with the realism of Night of The Iguana than with the broader charicature of Misalliance, and she's been cast shrewdly to type here. Yet remember that Lynn Fontanne played this role; if we can only acknowledge Arkadina's brutal coarsness, the surprise is not that her son kills himself but that he doesn't kill her.

Still, there is enough fascination in the intersection of acting and real-life in Alexander-Willis' casting, and enough panache in her work, to carry her. Howard Swain has greater difficulty as her son, a role he's clearly too old for, as well as curiously out of stylistic synch. But it is Ingenue from Hell Maud Winchester as Nina who rends the evening. The poor child has so many nervous twitchings she makes Sandy Dennis look like a zombie. In a program note, Director Kilty explains his casting of Swain and Winchester as underscoring to the generation gap in the play. He calls their acting 'imodern'. But the estimable Nancy Carlin is their peer, and she acts as the rest of the cast: normally. Winchester's acting is not "modern;" it is undisciplined. Her great scene with Swain in Act Two tears at the well-stitched fabric of belief that's been created. Yet by this point the production's sweep allows us to be generous, and we move to the play's conclusion without alienation.

Peter Donat, faced with Alexander-Willis and Winchester, underplays as the novelist and is splendid, as are Joy Carlin and the ruefully wondrous Ken Ruta. This then, is a Seagull we at first adore in its fulsomeness, only to find later that there is little cohesion in the ensemble. With the stylistic discrepancies he's asked for, Kilty cannot produce a work that is the sum of its many rich pieces. Although it is fast and funny, it is not as warm and sweetly sad as it should be. (Through April 4; 673-6440)

he Theatre Telos production of Maxim Gorky's The Lower Depths finishes its brief run at the Potrero Hill Neighborhood Theatre with three performances this weekend. I can recommend it to those intrigued with the chance to see this rarely produced play, a seminal work of 20th-century theater in both its realistic depiction of life among the lowest classes and its concern for social issues, traits which became hallmarks of much of this century's serious theater.

Gorky expected his depiction of society's human jetsam to be entertaining, a rest from what he termed "the tragedy of reality." He recognized, however, that this was a peculiarly Russian sort of entertainment. Anglo-Saxons, he noted, did not find "purifying the soul through suffering" as popular a notion as did Russians, and it seems likely that misconceived by Westerners, the idea that a play about suffering must be suffered through led to ponderously heavy, long and Serious-with-a-capital-S productions that have given this play a bad reputation and kept it off the boards. But despite some directorial longheurs and patches of bad acting, the Theatre Telos version reveals The Lower Depths to be as heartbreakingly comic as Chekhov, and an insistently meaningful evening. The value of illusion, the outsider in Society—these are subjects on the home ground of gay experience.

The Lower Depths takes place in a flophouse where poverty throws together in one cramped cellar the homeless, the dying, and the rejects. They reveal the illusions which sustain them, and then suffer the intrusion of a happy wanderer, Luka (played with sweet good humor and fortunate understatement by Richard Reineccius). His est-like pronouncements are well-meant, but are both insulting and harmful. No simple bromides can help men, and Gorki ridicules Luka's pep talks as 'mush for the toothless." It is society which has failed to meet man's most fundamental needs, an indictment made by Satin (robustly played by Cliff Mayotte). There's no little irony in Satin mouthing Gorky's idea that a clear-eyed view should enable men to recognize and fulfill their dignity and abilities as he downs another vodka.

The play has abundant humor. ("Belonging to the upper class is like small pox," Luka tells a former Baron. "You can get cured, but the scars remain;" and turning down a flirting woman, a man says, "You're no nail and I'm no pliers.") There's also melodrama galore, particularly a passionate menage which precipitates seduction and knifings, and some splendid montage effects for the ensemble as directed by Mohammad Kowsar. His moody opening and wellmanaged climaxes are visually memorable. Unfortunately, he frequently allows seriousness to displace pace and humor, and overacting to shred the ensemble. (The camp theatrics of Sue Carr are straight out of silent movies.) But there's much good playing, especially that of Walter Fitzwater and Chris Scott, and a beautifully atmospheric set by Fitzwater and Michael Dingle. This ambitious effort to mount a difficult play succeeds in its best moments in revivifying The Lower Depths. (647-8098) nlike most other cities, senior citizens dominate the entertainment market in Miami. Therefore, although many opera houses have a fairly active bar trade at intermission, the menu posted within South Florida's Dade County Auditorium specializes in candy bars, soft drinks, aspirin, and Rolaids. While the amount of blue hair and polyester to be seen at performances given by the Greater Miami Opera Association could strike fear into the hearts of dedicated opera queens, I'm convinced that the number of walkers in use could also allow GMOA to challenge Cincinnati Opera's claim to having the oldest and most infirm audience in America.

The advanced age of GMOA's audience, however, does not prevent local operagoers from partying during intermissions. Indeed, because for many years the management of the Dade County Auditorium — located in the heart of Anita Bryant's old stomping grounds — refused to sell booze to its patrons, the elite of Miami's society circumvented such prudishness by creating the operatic tailgate party. On opening night, you can see the chauffeurs of a half dozen Rolls-Royces and Bentleys dispensing champagne from the styrofoam coolers stored inside the trunks of their employers' cars!

Despite its high senior attendance rate, GMOA has gotten wise to the fact that most of its audience is very, very old and getting even older. Therefore, management is currently making an extra effort to woo a younger crowd to the opera by aiming at the influx of yuppies, Cubans, and other minorities who are rapidly changing the city's demographics. Ironically, when GMOA first tried lowering the prices to one of its subscription series in the hopes of attracting new audiences, most of the tickets were gobbled up by busloads of golden-agers. "And why not?" insisted one of Century Village's blue-rinse rabble-rousers. "It's the best bargain in South Florida!"

Nevertheless, new and younger audiences are starting to buy tickets. Whether it's a side-effect of Miami Vice's fashions or the feeling that Miami is a city which is finally coming into its own, the opening-night performance of last month's La Traviata drew a healthy smattering of young heterosexual Latinos, Sunbelt yuppies, and middle-class gay couples. To be sure, there was the usual crowd of aging socialites on hand, a group whose collective fashion violations could make a tired Tenderloin drag queen wince with embarrassment. But hope springs eternal.

SEEING DOUBLE

Miami is one of the few places in America where operas are still double cast. Three of its subscription series feature artists who are already working the international circuit while the other two subscription series offer young, American artists who are either trying out new roles for the first time in their careers or else working their way up the professional ladder.

What this does for a reviewer is allow him to examine a production on two consecutive nights as if he were being served the same kind of fish cooked with different herbs and spices. Balances change as various artists have good or bad nights and, as a result, a familiar opera can take on an entirely new look within 24 hours. Verdi's La Traviata went through a rather curious transition during my recent visit to Miami. On opening night, the performance was dominated by the soprano singing the role of Violetta. At the second performance, the dramatic core of the evening rested squarely in the hands of Alfredo and his father.

How does such a polarity occur? On opening night, Violetta was sung by Diana Soviero, an extremely skilled actress whose Violetta is one of the most psychologically introspective and theatrically thorough portrayals of Dumas' doomed courtesan. Although Soviero had some vocal problems during Act I (largely because of some cigar smoke left onstage by another actor) she sang with a great sense of dramatic conviction.

By contrast, Marianna Christos' heroine was a bit embarrassing. An extremely uneven artist, Christos (who was reportedly suffering from a cold) ricocheted through much of Violetta's first act with a carelessness that made one wonder when she had last studied the score. Although her fourth act was fairly decent, much of the soprano's performance gave the impression that she was casually walking through a familiar role in order to pick up a paycheck. Having seen many such performances before, I can't help but wonder if Christos has become an operatic example of the peter principle in action.

Although conductor Willie Waters offered firm support from the pit, neither Soviero nor Christos was helped by the questionable quirks of Bernard Uzan's stage direction, which was occasionally amateurish. Although Robert O'Hearn's sets and John Lehmeyer's costumes offered a solid sense of Paris in the late 19th century, while exiting the Dade County Auditorium I heard one little old lady put Verdi in his place by asking "What kind of doctors did they have in those days, anyway? He didn't even take that girl's blood pressure before she died!"

BUTCH SOUNDS

Although I usually tend to zero in on the soprano's work during any performance of Traviata, this time around I found myself paying special attention to the male leads. On opening night, Barry McCauley's Alfredo (despite one botched high note) revealed that the tenor was in much better shape than when last heard in San Francisco's ill-fated Lucia Di Lammermoor. Although his voice seems to be darkening, McCauley still looks good onstage and possesses a creditable vocal instrument. As Germont, Pablo Elvira offered his usual solid singing as well as a sturdy portrayal of Alfredo's father.

It was during the second performance, however, that I really sat up and got excited, for the male leads that night were being sung by two artists who were new to me and who hold exceptional promise. Paul Spencer Adkins' Alfredo demonstrated a beautiful tenorino voice which would be perfectly suited to roles like Tamino in The Magic Flute or Ernesto in Don Pasquale. As Germont, baritone Darren Nimnicht was absolutely superb, singing and acting with the kind of operatic passion which can only come from a committed artist who can deliver the goods. There aren't too many solid Verdi baritones these days, so keep your eyes and ears out for this man. He's got quite a nice future ahead of him.

Carmina Burana, etc.

In a rare appearance together, the Contra Costa Chorale and the Dick Kramer Gay Men's Chorale will perform their spring concert series, "Carmina Burana," featuring the title piece by Carl Orff and selected others.

"This concert will be exciting to conduct as well as experience because of the electricity the blend of men's and women's voices bring to the music," says Director Dick Kramer, who is musical director for both choruses.

Other presentations selected for the concert series are Debussy's "The Blessed Damozel," performed by the women of the Contra Costa Chorale, while the men of both chorales will perform Brahms' "Alto Rhapsody" featuring soloist Theresa Cardinale. The "Carmina Burana" will be accompanied by two pianists and a full percussion ensemble.

The two East Bay and one San Francisco performances are: Sunday, March 15, 2:30 p.m., Orinda Presbyterian Church in Lafayette; Saturday, March 21, 8 p.m., First Unitarian Church in Berkeley; and Sunday, March 22, 4 p.m., First Congregational Church in San Francisco.

Tickets are $9, general, $8, students, $7, seniors at the door, $7, general or $6 for students and seniors in advance. Advance tickets are on sale at all Headlines stores.

Cos and Effect

he Cosby Show had to spill over onto the big screen. Cos' TV daughter Lisa Bonet is baring her bod in Angel Heart, while Danny Glover and former Phil Spector singer Darlene Love are parenting a loving black family in Lethal Weapon.

THE HOT COUPLE

Mel Gibson and Danny Glover are each introduced naked in Lethal Weapon, Gibson from the rear and Glover from the waist up. That and an emphasis on drama over comedy distinguish this black-and-white partnered police action drama from Running Scared.

Both men are Vietnam vets. Glover's loving family includes Traci Wolfe, who gets to show a lot more range than this kind of part normally allows. The recently widowed Gibson is suicidal. Neither the criminals nor the police can tell how crazy he is or what he's capable of. He has fun playing more broadly than he ever has before.

The excuse for the action involves drugs, the CIA, albino killer Gary Busey, and Caliporno in the form of bare-breasted blondes. There's gratuitous lesbophobia when Mel allows the idea of two women in bed is 'disgusting.' There's also bondage and discipline when Mel is hung by his wrists, soaked, and given electric shock torture.

Director Richard Donner keeps things moving, and the stars act well enough to hold your interest during lulls. Most of the population of Los Angeles is jeopardized at some point, but the police shoot magic bullets that only kill bad guys. Mel stays in shape by racing on foot against cars, so when he wraps his legs around you you're dead meat.

Well done for what it is, Lethal Weapon is a combination of The French Connection and The Cosby Show. (Coronet, Empire, Grand Lake, Serramonte)

CHICKEN HEART

"There ain't nothin' worse for a cop than people who get killed for nutzo reasons," one of New Orleans' fattest tells Mickey Rourke in Alan Parker's Angel Heart. A lot of people — and chickens — get killed in this supernatural detective story for reasons that, when they're finally divulged, will strike the average viewer as pretty nutzo and the average critic as pretty trite.

Rourke is a New York detective in 1955 (despite too many anachronisms for a meticulous director like Parker), hired by Robert De Niro to find a singer who disappeared 12 years earlier. The trail leads to New Orleans and deep into voodoo culture, as Parker lays on the ethnographic scenery with a pace that not only lets you stop and smell the roses but gives you time to plant a new crop and watch them grow.

The scene with Lisa Bonet that had to be recut for an R rating is still rough, and probably made no more sense in the original version. It's one of several dreams, fantasies, or whatever that sort of tie together in the denouement.

Never less than interesting, Parker usually has something going visually, including far too many shots of window fans (the Wheel of Life?), but the Whydidn't-I-figure-that-out? ending is unsatisfying, even though it's the only possible resolution for all the unpleasantness that has gone before. A good director is foiled by his own fowl (screen)play. (Alexandria, Century Plaza)

DOWN LOWE ON THE FARM

In Square Dance, 13-year-old Winona Ryder doesn't want to spend the twilight of her youth in Twilight, Texas. She leaves the farm of her cantankerous grandfather, Jason Robards, and heads for Fort Worth to live with her trashy mother, Jane Alexander.

Gemma (Ryder) is a religious girl with churchmousy brown hair and glasses. A summer on the edge of a relatively big city expands her horizons, and she plays house with the local retard, Rob Lowe, while trying to figure out who she is and where she belongs.

Ryder, who got some of the best notices for Lucas, is good, but makes the transition from an ugly duckling to a pretty duckling look too simple. Alexander, who executive produced, is excellent in a role reminiscent of Shirley MacLaine's in Terms of Endearment. Robards also excels, though his part is less of a stretch. Lowe's risk in taking a supporting role pays off, and he almost manages to keep his clothes on throughout.

Square Dance is sweet and simple, the kind of movie you walk-not-run to see. (Kabuki)

DRY DREAM

A Nightmare on Elm Street was remarkable for its seamless blending of dreams and reality. Elm 2 wasn't as good but had interesting homoerotic aspects. Now there's A Nightmare on Elm Street 3: Dream Warriors, the least and — let's hope — last of the series.

eather contests are bursting out all over the place. They just selected the woman who will represent Sacramento at the forthcoming Intl. Ms. Leather Contest scheduled for Saturday, March 21, at the Club DV8. Last Sunday afternoon, the SF-Eagle patio was overrun with both men and women in leather for the beer bust benefit. It got so boisterous, a feminine tiff erupted but was quickly quelled. There are close to 15 contestants already, from as far away as London, and the roster will see contestants from Minneapolis, New York, Washington, and Los Angeles. Your support is urged for this effort by leather women in this community. Ticket sales are brisk already, so get yours now and be on hand.

he competition for Mr. Leather of SF begins at the SF-Eagle next Wednesday. 18 March. The winner will get $500 in cash, round-trip air fare, hotel accommodations, and the title. There will be three contests only, with the finalists from March 18. 25, and April 1 vying for the title April 8. Rumors abound as to who will or will not enter, and the judges will have their work cut out for them. See David Stoll at the SF-Eagle or any one of the bartenders if you plan to enter the competition. The Powerhouse will select a contestant to represent them and Lonnie Lee will represent Kinky's, the new book/video store on Taylor St. The weekend package deal has been settled finally, and the trip from 22 May through 25 May will cost you $449 which includes round trip air fare, hotel, reserved seating at Intl. Mr. Leather, and several parties in the Windy City during that weekend. Call 861-7348 or 864-0401 if you're interested, but don't wait! Join several other leathermen for the Olympics of leather in Chicago.

Before the doors opened some $5,000 was raised in advance raffle tickets for the round-trip for two to Hawaii. SF AIDS chair Hank Gook joined George Burgess and Bill Fink in representing SF at the affair.

Tammy Lynn was gorgeous in drag as only Tammy can be, and former Mr. Drummer Ray Perea and his Ski were there too. The crowd was fantastic and most generous. There were so many items donated for auction some of them were put on sale outright. Good show in Sonoma County. t looks like the powers that be are finally getting used to the idea that the leather community exists and deserves representation in the annual Gay Freedom Day Parade, to wit: they're looking for volunteers to join the (ready?) First and Only SF Precision Whip Drill Team (FOSFPWDT), a group of male and female whip enthusiasts. The organizing meeting will take place Wed., March 18. They already have a dozen members and would like to have at least 10 or 15 more, so call Bette at 585-2262 after 1800 hours but do it now!

s Spring approaches, is your blood getting stirred up to get out and socialize? As usual, there is a plethora of activity coming your way. The SF Jacks are having an Irish Toga Night Monday, 16 March, at their Folsom clubhouse. March 23 they'll be celebrating their 4th Anniversary (and still pounding the pud!). Their actual anniversary date is Monday, March 30, and their newsletter says: "Be there or be limp! Are you man enough to miss the Academy Awards?" If you need more info, contact John at 552-5541. You are also reminded that April 1 (Wed.) is National J/O Day!

This Saturday is the Cycle Runners M/C Toga III party with the crowning of Caligula and lots of fun and games. With Will Bolger traipsing around Europe, I've been assured the Toga party will come off without a hitch with or without Will.

Sunday, March 15, the Cal Eagles take over the SF-Eagle patio for a St. Pat's Beer Bust with door prizes, popcorn (popcorn?) and food. If I knew they were serving Corned Beef and Cabbage I'd tell you so, but Jeff Mitchellcraft, corresponding secretary, didn't give me any details. A week later on the 21st, the Cal Eagles will have a one-day ride to Port Costa leaving the Watering Hole at 0930.

Sun., 22 March, the GDI's will be having their annual Spring Equinox Beer Bash at the Eagle from 1500-1800. Tom O'Dea, their newest member, is expected to be on hand with his big truck for the occasion, and the new Road Captain, Bryan Kelly, will be busy as hell. Remember, Jim Leuer, when it was all so independent and so simple?

The SF-Eagles softball team has a beer bust planned for Fri., March 20, from 2000-2300 to welcome the Intl. Ms. Leather contestants.

Bill Bowers' photo show opens that same night and will hang until April 3 when the subjects of the photos will be dished and their photos auctioned off with 50% of the proceeds going to the Coming Home Hospice.

Direct from NY, Mistress S (no relation to Mister S) will perform at Intl. Ms. Leather and will take the stage at the Baybrick Inn on Tues., March 24, at 2100 hours, so don't miss it!

Sunday, 15 March, Bradley's Corner (Cole & Carl) will have a $10 champagne brunch to benefit Shanti from 1000 to 1600. Bradley's will be closing soon, so this is their last fundraiser before they shut the doors down forever. Their first was a huge success, and manager Danny Wong wants to go out with a big bang! André Vaughn is organizing this one, so you know it will be very festive.

and Jerry Pepper are lining a the Brown Bag Day fundraiser.

You'll be hearing a lot about this one in the future, so keep it in mind as it will be one of the biggest benefits ever in this town!

That should be enough to keep you busy and off the streets for awhile. Remember, when you leave the bar(s) with a stranger, be sure to let someone you know or the bartender know. It's not a thing like, "Look girl, I'm making out!" It's for your own protection. You never know what you'll run into these days with so many queer haters on the loose.

DISH COULD BE THE START OF SOMETHING. .

I can't think of anything more low-down than to go around town spreading a lie that someone is dying from AIDS when the person(s) in question are alive and well and quite shocked to hear of his own approaching death(s). What kind of an evil queen thinks up this evil, evil gossip? I know hell hath no fury like a scorned (or rejected) queen, but this is as low as you can get. For your info, David Sarathain is alive and well, so stop already!

Jim Cvitanich and Mark Abramson are in heavy-duty conferences already putting together and planning Men Behind Bars IV to be held President's Weekend 1988. You've seen their previous efforts (each won a Cable Car Award), so since they'll be going into the Hall of Honor now, they will outdo the three previous efforts. Bartenders with or without talent are welcome to audition. This one will be hot!

Hope you caught this week's issue of People Magazine featuring our own Rita Rockett; one night last week Rita was a subject in a report on AIDS Angels around the country on Tom Brokaw's show — all dedicated people, including a teenager who is really taking it like a champ when he's taunted by his ignorant classmates! Nice going, Rita!

Have you got your tickets for the Intl. Ms. Leather contest yet on 21 March? They're $20 in advance or $25 at the door and available at Mister S, Sandmutopia Supply Co. (15 Harriet), or by mail from IML, Inc., 1519 Mission, SF 94103.

Did you know the "Pigs in Paradise" (gay cops) have their own newspaper now? It's called (I love it) The Hog Caller. The PIP's had a recent weekend party in Palm Springs, and after all the shenanigans which I cannot print, I hear someone is opening a new bar here for pigs and friends to be called The Pig Pen—oh really?

In answer to your many queries about whether the Ambush Bar will re-open, I am sorry to report that the effort(s) by friends and former customers of the Ambush have not been able to rally enough to re-open the premises. It is my understanding that several thousand dollars will be needed to renovate the place to the owner's satisfaction. Keep your fingers crossed. In the meantime, some of the former Ambush bartenders are on duty at the New World (1225 Folsom) if you care to rehash old times!

Last Thursday at the Endup, another fantastic Buns Calendar Contest took place; Miss Upstate New York Maria Iacovino teamed up with a visiting countess from Sicily to set the place into a panie! The contestants endured more than anyone should have to, what with such questions relating to FF of A from the judges and the women fondling the buns for firmness. The 1st Intl. Mr. Leather David Kloss (formerly of this town) was on hand too, and for Russ Godwin, the other judge, it was all he could do to keep score, cruise the other judge (Mr. Kloss), and keep up with the women judges. In the end, a land-scape man of sorts, Steve Miller, managed to pull his 27 years, black hair, green eyes, and a gold-sequined throbber into shape to win the Mr. July 1988 title. Steve may be headed for even bigger stardom since all of a sudden he has become a hot property for certain magazines and catalogs! See, you never know what entering these contests can bring your way.

have always had a theory about writing about people, places, or events that I don't have the real tea on, and that theory is that sooner or later you are going to be caught writing something, having it published, and having it turn out to not have happened the way you had 100 percent thought it would. The same idea goes along with reporting on events you were not a hundred miles close to. So all I a nundred miles close to. 50 and 1 can say, with none of the above-mentioned guilt complexes haunting me, about the Coits Skidazzle trip, is that Empress Tina Tanner was able to rehearse a stepping down when she step-ped down as Queen of the South Shore, handing over that title to Jonathan Kent. If you want the rest of the dirt on that trip you will have to get it from one of the many participants who were there. Another source of information might be Stanley at the Mint, who busted his ass on making the trip a success! trip a success!

Code Blue

Speakeasy Turned Nightclub In North Beach

by Dianne Gregory

old speakeasy in North A nold speakeasy in North Beach is seeing new life these nights. The ghosts of debauches-past linger on amidst the scores of women who gather at the old watering place every Saturday night to give it a new history. Re-awakened as Code Blue, the walls of the basement nightclub at Lombard and Taylor literally vibrate with the ear-splitting music of those who inhabit it now and the indiscretions of those who came before.

Code Blue is the latest offspring of one Caroline Clone, originally of London and lately of Los Angeles. Although a fashion designer by trade, Clone got into the nightclub business in London while still in school.

while still in school.

"I've really done a lot of things in the UK, clubs and things," said Clone in a recent interview. From earning extra money as a DJ while she attended art college, she became the manager of a now-defunct lessian bar called Louise's in London's Soho district. Then she started and was part-owner of another lesbian club in London called Billy's. But all was not rosy in the London club scene, so Clone decided to join her brother in Los Angeles and forget about in Los Angeles and forget about the nightclub business.

"I had no intention of going back into the business," said Clone. But she saw a crying need for a place for women to go in Los Angeles and "couldn't ignore it," Angeles and "couldn't ignore it," so Clone's on La Cienaga Blvd. in Beverly Hills was born in 1982. It was a Gypsy Club, open only one night a week, and for a short duration. By this time Clone says she was suffering from "club addiction" and opened another one salled Solo. called Solo

After those two short-lived clubs opened and closed she opened Deja Vu in Long Beach, which still operates on Thursday nights. She comes up to San Francisco on Saturdays to oversee Code Blue and is gone by Mandow. Monday.

"I was inspired," said Clone, and she just loved San Francisco, so when her friends up here asked her why she didn't start a club in San Francisco, she says it "just fell together in a very nat-ural way." She wandered around the city for a few days looking for a good location, and hit on North Beach.

"I just love basement clubs," said Clone, "and there are none in LA." So when she met with the manager of Wolfgang's, which owns the space, one thing led to another and Code Blue was born.

She says the Bill Graham Pre-She says the Bill Granam Fresents organization, which owns Wolfgang's, was familiar with her other clubs, and is very supportive of her latest effort, not only renting the space but providing technical support.

"I'm really having a good time," said Clone, "and as long as the women of San Francisco support us we'll be here." She adds that she thinks the "European-style nightclub" will develop its own crowd and not take away from other women's bars. She said she simply wants to sunnly an alternative. supply an alternative.

"Every week the club gets bet-ter and better," said Clone, "and when it stops happening here I'll go on to other projects."

he main impression left he main impression left from a recent visit to Code Blue was that of loud mu-sic. Very loud. Shouting in peo-ple's ear and remaining unintel-ligible loud. And that's before you get on the dance floor. The nearly bare white walls and the concrete floor give the place an unfinished, industrial look popular in some circles, but the sound waves bounce around the space in such a way as to numb the mind. CLASS DISTINCTION

Writer John Hughes and director Howard Deutch got it right last year with Pretty in Pink, but they're repeating the story with genders reversed in Some Kind genders reversed in Jome Khaa of Wonderful. They've got it right again. All that's missing is the Drifters' title song, which would have made a nice chart sequel to "Stand by Me."

Eric Stolz (Mask) has three strikes against him for high school success: "I like art I work in a gas station, my best friend's a tomboy." He's the poor kid with a crush on a — well, Lea Thompa crush on a — well, Lea I nomp-son's not rich but she hangs out with that crowd in hopes it will rub off. Mary Stuart Masterson is Stolz' buddy who, obviously to everyone but him, is in love with him. Thompson is used and abused by Craig Sheffer, the school stud who considers her his 'property.'

All four are terrific, especially Masterson, and Thompson, who moves to Howard Deutch from Howard the Duck, gives her best peformance and has an appealing Ann-Margret-ish look. Maddie Corman, as Stolz' sister, makes a promising bid to be the next Molly Ringwald.

Some of the dialogue fits the characters and some doesn't, but it's all choice, and so is the music. Hughes makes this look too easy. (Regency I)

PRECIOUS METAL

Tin Men has heart. It's about Baltimore's aluminum siding salesmen in 1963, the year the law cracked down on their decep-tive high-pressure scams and the tide started turning in favor of the consumer. Diner director-writer Barry Levinson returns home to the city whose conven-tional side he knows as well as John Waters knows its seamy

Danny DeVito adds some depth to his standard character of a little man whose neck is stiff from looking up at the world that keeps dumping on him. An accident escalates into a major feud between him and rival tin man Richard Dreyfuss, who pulls "the ultimate fuck-you" by screwing Barbara Hershey, who is surpris-ingly good as DeVito's blue-collar

The dialogue is brilliant in capturing the camaraderic of the tin men, which ranges from accurately homophobic banter to the Monday morning dishing of Bonanza for showing "a 50-year-old father with three 47-year-old rang" on a rangh where probedy on a ranch where nobody ever gets horny

Applause must also go to Elizabeth Evans, who was so moving as Claire, the 14-year-old daughter of Connie. And let's applaud the sets, too, done by Peter Grote, and the special effects by Zoe Elton—very ambitious and well-realized, especially given the limitations of the stage area.

Harvey Fierstein has written this play with great feeling, for the characters and for the words. The repetitiveness of some ideas and arguments and the niggling, gnawing feeling of disbelief that so many plagues can beset one family do bother me to a certain degree, but that is easily overcome by the power and passion of come by the power and passion of this production, for which great credit must be given to director Kris Gannon, who, I believe, in-fused it with sincerity and realism.

Harry Britt For Congress Fundraiser, Galleon, 7-9 p.m., hors d'oeuvres, $25 donation. ●

Compiled by Diedre

Since Dennis Collins and Duke Armstrong have been haranguing me to make a statement about my preference for a candidate in the upcoming special congressional election, I have had to gressional election, I have had to sit and ponder the candidates. I was pleased to see Harry Britt in his fourth appearance South of Market last Sunday at the Eagle beer bust. I need to have many questions answered by Harry. And I agree that we need some "(gay" input in Congress. After all, Rep. Studds can't be expected to have all those congressional pages to himself!

Until next week, support all worthy charities for your gay brothers and lesbian sisters, keep your legs crossed, and remember: The person who is too old to learn was probably always too old to learn. I hope the person regis-tering all those titles that do not rightfully belong to him has a good attorney. This is one act of revenge that can only backfire . and backfire reall! bad!

Friese

this festive drinking holiday. The Bell will be having their party this Sunday with food, fun, and surprises all starting at 6 a.m.
with the voting for Mr. Irishman going 'til 5 p.m. and the winner being announced at 6 p.m. The current reigning Mr. Irishman, Mick O'Ridolfi, will be the host for this party. Happy birthday to for this party. Happy birthday to Cow-Mama!

The High Chaparral, 2140 Market St., will be having a St. Pat's party on Sunday with food and entertainment as a benefit and entertainment as a benefit for Coming Home Hospice. The party will be from 3 to 6 p.m., donation is $5, and it will be hosted by St. Clair Adams and Michael Callery.

What St. Patrick's Day would be the same without a party with the Shamrock Emperor Bobby the Shamrock Emperor Bobby Pace? So just so you know what he is up to, I can tell you that the Kokpit will be featuring a Bobby Pace party along with an auction for the Kokpit softball team on Tuesday the 17th, all beginning at 7 p.m. with more fun than you can shake a shillelagh at!

The Galleon will also be having a party on the 17th which will be in honor of our new Emperor and Empress, Patrick and Tina. This party starts at 7 p.m. and will include a St. Patrick's buffet with all the trimmings for $10.95, and they will also be serving their regular delicious Galleon menu.

As we all know there will cer-tainly not be a lack of places to go to celebrate St. Pat's day! So check out your favorite bar, mark it on your calendar, and grab a friend and go!

Right now there is a very interesting photographic exhibition at U.C. Extension, 55 Laguna, that is well worth your time to drop by and see. It is titled "Transvestites" and is the work of De Ann Jennings who work of De Ann Jennings who has covered most of the transvestite/gay events in L.A. for many years. It is interesting, and some of you might just recognize a few of the people in the photographs. Thanks Fran.

The laundry is dry, my cat would have nothing to do with Sable's Motz, and just because someone is capable of doing drag doesn't mean that he/she is 21 More innuendos next column!

Now is the time for Harry Britt. Need I say more?

Robert Bell

One of the New Kids In The Pool League

by Paul Trefzger

obert Bell is a Los Angeles transplant and that's fine with him. "I needed a change of pace, weather, atmosphere. I like it here. That was two years ago. At the time, I didn't know anyone. Now I know half the city." I asked if that had been the result of his sport of choice, pool. He agreed.

agreed.

Bell plays with The Special's team, A Special Breed, and this is his first season. He was encouraged by his friend Ozzie Santiago, who is known around town for his ability and high average. Of Bell, Santiago said, "He's a good player. He's got a good attitude, and that's important. He didn't do so well first time around, but he'll kick in." That night at The Special, Santiago won three of his four games.

Robert got an early start in life at playing pool.

"I started playing when I was around 18 or 19. I was taught by my dad and brother. My mother played too. We played in nearby taverns, bars, and bowling alleys."

Ever since his relocation to S.F., he's been a regular at the Castro Station's pool table. I asked, "Why then, The Special?" He said, "The Castro Station's just getting their team together. The Special's had a team for a long time. The DeLuxe Ducks have been winning, and Ozzie wants to beat them. They called me and asked if I would be interested in getting involved with the SFPA (San Francisco Pool Association). I didn't feel that I was ready to play until this year."

I asked Bell to explain the setup. "There are four divisions," he said, "and 32 bars. Badlands and Bear Hollow are in our division too." The B.A.R. lists the top ten players averages and team averages. "There are spring and fall seasons which last 15 weeks." I asked Robert if he was uptight about his first game a few days prior to it.

Robert Rell

"No," he told me. "I feel good—relaxed, comfortable I'm confident and I want to help this team win this year. I heard that it's a good possibility." I asked if his family was aware of his competing. He said, "I want to hold out and see if we win a trophy."

Bell spoke about his game. "I can play good one night and the next day, go out and play lousy. The only thing that ruins my concentration is when it's noisy, too loud music, too many people around. Also it's bad if I get overconfident or drink too much. A couple of beers is the limit. Then it's coke or cranberry juice. Also, I like a place that's small and quiet."

Robert was born July 25, 1956 in Southern California. "I got involved with drugs, the wrong kind of people. I got in trouble. I didn't want to have any more to do with it, so I gave it all up. When I came here, I wanted to settle down and did." His lover of two years is Lauren Coleman. "Lauren," he said, "is going to school to become a legal secretary. He graduates in April. We go out to bars together—Castro, Polk—but a lot of the time we just stay home and watch TV. We met at The Village. He's a movie buff—Bette Davis, Joan Crawford, Lauren Bacall. He's from New York?' I asked if Coleman was also interested in pool. "No," Bell told me, "but he'll be coming to my games."

I then asked Robert about his fitness activities. "Not much lately," he said. "I lift weights when I have them. I played high school football, baseball, and basketball, which was my best sport. I would like to join Gay Games III and go to Vancouver in '90 for pool."

Gav Games III

Gay Games III, one of the world's largest international athletic and cultural events, happens in Vancouver, Canada in 1990.

Former U.S. Olympic decathalete, Tom Waddell announced the site selection committee's decision at closing ceremonies of Gay Games II before 17,000 spectators last August.

The games are open to everyone who supports their philosophy. "Participation and doing one's personal best are more important than winning," said Waddell. "Our friendly competitions work to remove age, sex, and racial stereotypes."

With a focus on making the games more of an international event, San Francisco invited other cities to bid for the games. A group of Vancouver organizers (Betty Baxter, Richard Dopson, Mark Mees, Barry McDell, Bill Raymond, and Judy Saunders) began probing the community to determine the level of support. They found it favorable, not only in the lesbian and gay communities, but with individuals such as former Vancouver Mayor Michael Harcourt, Bruce Kidd (Canadian Olympic Academy).

and Members of Parliament Pat Carney and Margaret Mitchell.

Parallel with the athletic events will be a cultural festival. Visual art, theater, dance, video, readings, and music will all be welcomed as part of the games. We hope to show the world the depth of Canadian gay and lesbian culture.

In an effort to be inclusive rather than exclusive, the 1990 committee invites everyone to Vancouver in 1990.

179 cities participated in 14 sports in Gay Games I; 259 cities, 17 sports in Gay Games II. We expect that in 1990 this growth will continue. To ensure success, we will need to draw on the resources of the whole Canadian gay/lesbian community.

Send us your ideas, create a job for yourself, start training to participate in a sport or plan your cultural contribution, but start now. Help Vancouver celebrate Gay Games III in 1990!

Call (604) 736-4017 or write: Metropolitan Vancouver Athletic and Arts Association, 1170 Bute St., Vancouver, B.C. Canada V6E 1Z6 for more information.

SFBA Gay Bowling Blitz

by Jerry R. De Young

Over the weekend of 2/28-3/1, the team segment of the Citywide SFBA Bowling Tournament was held at Park Bowl. The proud gay community was amply represented by 28 of the 109 five-member teams on the roster. Since open gay participation in this prestigay participation in this presti-gious event began several years ago, the gay teams have been steadily climbing upwards. At this year's tournament four of the top seven positions were captured by teams composed of Tavern Guild and Community League bowlers: the crack S.F. Pin Tweakers bagged second place with their incredible 3221 total; 5th, 6th, and 7th positions were seized by the precision-oriented Ram's Head Bar (3144), Balls Afire (3109), and The Whirl and Twirl Girls (3106), respectively. The indomitable Play With It, Ltd. team added a dazzling new facet to this already stunning quadrilateral jewel by virtue of their brilliant 990 HSG.

During the SFBA tourney, another inspirational achievement which reflects the finest aspect of which reflects the finest aspect of team spirit was accomplished by Jay Merriman of the Capricorn Coffees. Jay finished the 4th frame of the first game with the lowest pin-count on his team yet. Instead of despairing, he exhibited a wholesome confidence in his ability and surged onward to joyfully end the 10th frame with his team's highest pin-count. The lanes also resounded with enthusiastic applause and supportive cheers as yet another example of exceptional bowling skill was demonstrated by pin specialist Dan Ford of the strik-ing 757 Medical team when he recovered the very, very unlikely 4-7-9-10 split.

This sensational achievement septet realized on the lanes at Park Bowl during the 1987 SFBA Citywide Tournament was appropriately complimented by this year's Cable Car Awards cere-mony at which a very deserving Mal Garcia received official recognition as Bowler of the Year. He is presently processing per-sons proffering to polish his plaque.

The extraordinary performance of so many TGBL&CBL bowlers at this year's SFBA Tournament is something about which the bowling leagues, the community, and yes, even the en-tire city can take immense pride. Obviously, a vibrant new force has become a permanent part of the SFBA Annual Bowling Tournament's character, a force that can rightfully boast of its gen-erous number of top positions among the best SFBA bowling

Record 20 Teams Join Gay Softball League

by Tom Vindeed

Who said gay people aren't in-terested in much of anything for a very long time? As the Gay Soft-ball League enters its 10th year, a record 20 teams have signed up to play, including four women's Luckily the World Series is in San Francisco this year because we will be able to use the extra weeks for playing games instead of traveling thousands of miles to another city.

This Saturday the divisions for the league will be picked at the GSL meeting to be held at the Cafe San Marcos. Every year this turns out to be one of the fun meetings of the season and this year should be no different. As usual, the meeting starts at noon.

Opening day is set for Sunday, March 29, at Lang Field, Gough and Golden Gate. Two games be-tween arch rivals have been picked, so it could be very in-teresting.

On the distaff side we have the defending champions Amelia's taking on Super Star Video. And on the men's side the perennial powerhouse and defending champion Pendulum Pirates will vie with the End-up.

There is plenty of hoopla planned on and off the field as planned on and off the field as the league celebrates its 10th an-inversary. Not bad for a league that wasn't supposed to make it lo those many years ago.

The Mr./Ms. GSL applications will be passed out at the league meeting, and the kick-off dance announcing the contestants will be one of the highlights of opening-week festivities. Sunday the 22nd finds us at Park Bowl for our annual Bowl Off, with details at the league meeting.

Congratulations to Francis Medeiros for his selection as the person who contributes the most to softball at the recent Cable Car Awards. Outstanding Contribution to Athletics was won by Hal Herkenhoff, and on the wo-men's side, Donna Jane Fonda finally received the award she deserves for softball.

"Marvelous" Mal Garcia won the bowling award, and hard-working Velda Gooden won Outstanding Contribution to Athletics for women.

Different Spokes won a second consecutive Board of Directors award for the 1986 Bike-A-Thon that raised $226,000 for AIDS

Dynamic Dr. Tom Waddell was Harvey Milk award for his dedica-tion to Gay Games I and II. The Board of Directors for GGII ac-cepted the award with him.

Chuck "Cha Cha" Chateau will have a send-off party this Sunday at the Kokpit beginning at 5 p.m. As we all know, he has been a tireless worker for his teams and the GSL for many years. Stop by and say a fond farewell to one of the better sports softball has known for a dozen years or so. Good luck, Chuck. I'll miss you.

Next week I'll have a comment on the Rainbow Roos fundraiser and predictions on how teams will fare this year.

A final thought. This week the members of the GSL have a chance to show how the league has matured in 10 years when the vote to let the commissioner play comes up. When I was part of the writing of the constitution we wanted to keep "certain" people in or out, as the case may be. Now they are no longer around, and it's time to drop this rule. Next year we could wind up with someone who knows nothing about softball and then what will we do? A yes vote will open the way for many league members to seek of-fice. Let it keep moving forward.

Cascade Cup

Seattle — Seattle's Emerald City Softball Association announces plans to host the Emerald City Cascade Cup, a four-day softball tournament, from Friday, May 22, to Monday, May 25. All men's and women's teams in the NAGAAA League are invited to participate.

A meet and greet registration party, the games at Riverview Playfield, a post-tournament awards banquet, and a cruise on Puget Sound are some of the highlights of this year's Emerald City Cascade Cup.

The double-elimination tournament will abide by ASA rules, and is limited to the first 12 men's and women's teams that register. Cost per team is $175. Deadline for registration is Friday, April 17.

Now is the time to prepare for the 1987 Gay World Series in San Francisco. Seattle provides similar weather conditions, as well as an opportunity to evaluate the competition.

For further information call Gail Britto at (206) 938-0373, or Mike DiMartino at (206) 232-3542.

teams (fifth substitute bowler optional).

Anyone wishing to join a team, form one, or register an existing team into one of the above bowling leagues should contact Mal Garcia at 752-2366 before that league's pre-season meeting to assure space availability.

Howling at the Moon

Due to popular demand, Friday, March 13, will continue the smashing success of a new concept in tea dance entertainment as City Swing dance band, The San Francisco Tap Troupe, and The Ritz Dancers present Howling at the Moon. Trocadero Transfer, named for the famed Hollywood ballroom of the 1930s and '40s, is the location for this exciting evening of dancing and entertainment. Swing back the doors of time and join us at 5:30 p.m. for three hours of nonstop "razzle dazzle."

Last month, the first tea dance presented by these groups was a huge hit, as dancers of every persuasion "flocked to the clarion call of swing music" and crowded the floor to dance to the sounds of the Big Band era. City Swing recreates this era with a contemporary flair and feeling as one of the Bay Area's few 18-piece dance bands in the Glenn Miller tradition. The San Francisco Tap Troupe, noted for its precision style and inventive production numbers, and the Ritz Dancers, a wonderful ensemble that captures the spirit of the 1920s, '30s, and '40s, round out an evening of great musical entertainment and dancing.

It's Friday the 13th, and time to let those inhibitions out, discover that untamed animal within, and find yourself Howling at the Moon. See you on the dance floor!

Tickets for Howling at the Moon are $6 and will be available at the door that evening.

Purim Celebration at Ahavat Shalom

Congregation Ahavat Shalom will celebrate Purim Saturday, March 14, at 7:30 p.m. at 150 Eureka St. (near 18th). Everyone is invited to come in exotic costume.

There will be a Purimshpiel with a special performance by The Ahavettes, coming to San Francisco from their gay haven in the West Coast Catskills especially for the evening's merriment. Also, Diane Frank, renowned folk dance instructor, will lead the folk dance promenade.

There is no cost to attend, but everyone is encouraged to bring a donation of food or toiletries for the San Francisco AIDS Foundation Food Bank.

The name of the holiday, Purim, comes from the Persian word meaning "lots," the method used by the wicked Haman to determine the date for his intended annihilation of the Persian Jewish community. The story of Purim, with its heroes Queen Esther and Mordecai, the Persian King Ahasuerus, and the villain Haman, is told in the biblical book of Esther.

Congregation Ahavat Shalom will celebrate the deliverance of the Persian Jews by the traditional reading of the Scroll of Esther, followed by merriment and revelry.

Free childcare (with 48-hour notice) and free sign-language interpretation (with seven-day notice) can be provided. For more information, please call 621-1020.

Brunch and Auction Fundraiser for Theatre Rhino

Theatre Rhinoceros' Playwright's Workshop will hold a brunch and auction Saturday, March 21, at 11 a.m. The event will take place at the Metropolitan Community Church (150 Eureka at Market in San Francisco). Admission is $3 and tickets are available at the door or at the Rhino box office window (16th Street near Mission).

The meal of spaghetti and assorted healthy side dishes will be furnished by the Rainbow Grocery, and various merchants in the Bay Area have donated items and services to be auctioned. Proceeds will be used to fund the production of two original full-length plays later in the year.

The Rhino's workshop is a group of lesbian and gay writers who develop original plays through a series of staged readings and minimal productions. Their works range from domestic dramas about coming out to comedic murder mysteries.

Friday Night Social at The Parsonage

The Parsonage, a ministry of the Episcopal Diocese of California in the midst of the gay and lesbian community in San Francisco, has once again begun hosting a Friday evening social hour. Lasting from approximately 7:30 to 9:30 on Friday evenings, this is a time of quiet conviviality at the Victorian Cottage located behind Herth Realty and next to Headlines at 555A Castro St.

The Parsonage is unique within the structure of the Episcopal Church as an outreach to the gay and lesbian community. It acts as a place for dialogue within the church on matters of homosexuality. Therefore, its ministry is not only to gay men and lesbians who may have become alienated from the church, but also is a ministry toward the church at large, hoping to educate church leaders about the particular needs and perspectives of the gay and lesbian community.

For more information about the Parsonage, come to the social hour or call 552-2909.

Exhibits on AIDS

A series of exhibits concerning AIDS including photographs by Gypsy Ray and statements by those portrayed will be held at the Santa Cruz Public Library March 1-31 and the Louden Nelson Community Center in May.

In addition, partial exhibits will be held at the Branciforte Public Library on Gault Street in Santa Cruz March 1-31 and at the Santa Cruz AIDS Project, 234 Santa Cruz Ave. in Seacliff, in a rotating exhibit.

These exhibits have been made possible in part through support from the Santa Cruz City Arts Commission and the Santa Cruz AIDS Project.

Coming of Age

Chuck Solomon: Coming of Age, a one-hour KQED special presentation on Tuesday, April 6 at 10:30 p.m. on channel 9, and Friday, April 10, at 8 p.m. on channel 32, is an uplifting celebration of the life of a remarkable man and his community.

After losing his brother, lover, and several friends to the AIDS epidemic, San Francisco actor/ director Chuck Solomon was himself diagnosed with the disease. Friends rallied to his support by staging a joyous 40th birthday party for Solomon on March 10, 1986. In Chuck Solomon: Coming of Age, filmmakers Marc Huestis and Wendy Dallas honor their friend, who died December 2, 1986, by incorporating tape of the evening and interviews with Solomon, his friends, and his mother.

Solomon talks candidly of his life as a gay man and his career in the theater, illustrated by stills and footage from his performance in the groundbreaking Crimes Against Nature, Factwino Meets the Moral Majority, and others. Solomon is seen visiting his doctor, at work at Theatre Rhinoceros, which he cofounded, and finally at the birthday gala. Counted among the friends who perform for Solomon are Doris Fish, poet Aaron Shurin, singer Esmeralda, comedian Tom Ammiano, and the cast of The A.l.D.S. Show.

Solomon's personality — his intelligence, humor, and hope — is the life of Chuck Solomon: Coming of Age. Acknowledging the outpouring of devotion shown by his friends at the birthday party, Solomon opens his emotional thank-you with: "To think so many people love me makes me feel like Sally Field."
